What Name for Hoover?
Lolordo's Last Drink
A Modern Rich Man
Mrs. Causekas' Bare Legs

IF AMERICANS call President Coolidge "the Silent President" what will they call Mr. Hoover? He has been elected President of the United States, will begin his work in less than two months, has been in Washington several days at work. How much has he talked? Not at all.

Eight years more of business without conversation will suit this country very well. We have had, at various times, considerable periods of conversation without business.

Chicago gunmen might learn from the Lord Mayor in London.

At the Lord Mayor's dinner a loving cup passes around. When you bury your face in the big tankard, and drink spiced wine, the man at your left rises and stands behind you. That custom comes from old days, the man standing was supposed to prevent your being stabbed in the back as you drank.

Pasqualino Lolordo hadn't heard of this. Three smiling friends offered to drink his health. He lifted his glass and the three smiling ones sent eleven bullets into his head, neck and shoulders. Lolordo succeeded Tony Lombardo, murdered not long ago, as a gang ruler.

Viscount Eunismore, 22, heir to the Earl of Listowell, renounces title and his riches, calls himself a Socialist, and founds a company, "Neighbors, Ltd.," to enable wealthy Socialists to give their money to the poor.

Such an organization was suggested 1900 years ago, but the idea has not been genuinely adopted.

Viscount Eunismore, who now calls himself William Francis Hare, when older, will realize that men want to do something while they live. For most of them, money is necessary, first, to provide freedom of action, and second, to make action possible.

Mrs. Mary Causekas thought it unnecessary to wear clothing. She tried bare legs in public, and spent three months in jail in virtuous Pottsville, Pa.

The lady should have chosen Palm Beach or the light opera stage. Pottsville was a mistake. The judge, when he ordered her case, let her go, on the ground that a washwoman's bare legs are no worse than those of a Palm Beach beauty or glorified girl.

The New York Academy of Medicine, with the free will cooperation of distinguished doctors all over the country, prepares information on all medical questions, and issued recently a statement of medical progress in the year past.

Most important is discovery of a cure for pernicious anaemia, hitherto deadly.

In dissecting bodies of those dead of anaemia, scientists discovered that the liver always lacked a certain substance. That substance is now supplied, in the form of an extract from normal liver, and the anaemia is cured.

Another important discovery shows, in cancer, power in certain cells to reproduce and grow abnormally, creating a cancerous tumor. Where that power comes science does not know. It originates in irritation of the tissues.

This is the richest country in the world, but everything is comparative, and real money is scarce. All money circulating in the United States amounts to less than five thousand millions of dollars, about $41.77 for each American.

Our great wealth, of course, is not in dollars, but in values not yet changed into dollars, mines, mills, oil wells, power. There are two or three men in the country whose property, rightly appraised, would probably show a value not far from five billions.

American farmers have their troubles, farmers in Japan have worse ones.

When our farmers complain, Government at least MAKES PROMISES.

Yesterday when thousands of Japanese peasants marched to express dissatisfaction, 40 were shot dead and many wounded.

An American may become head of Salvation Army forces throughout the world in place of General Booth, who has ruled from London. Supporters of General Booth see the power of "American gold."

The Salvation Army in America has $43,000,000 worth of property, and where money is power is.

Those that have contributed to Salvation Army funds are delighted to know that the Army is doing so well. Some may wonder whether wisdom was shown in not devoting more of the $43,000,000 to the poor, and less to property.

Countess, Boston Girl, Asks Divorce

BATTLE WITH JUDGE FUCHS DESCRIBED BY MAJ. LYNCH

Old Ames Mansion Burned; Loss $50,000

RICH HUB WOMAN IN SUIT

The beautiful Countess Pierre de Jumilhac, formerly Constance Coolidge, Boston heiress and one of the most widely known sportswomen in Europe, is seeking a divorce for the second time, it was learned today.

The countess, whose first husband was Fay Atherton, American diplomat in the Orient and also member of an old Boston family, has applied for a divorce in Paris, with details kept a secret.

Born the daughter of David Coolidge, former Boston landscape artist, her first romance took place in Paris, and led to a wedding when Constance was but 17. She had accompanied her father to Germany, where he was painting, and had run over to Paris for a visit.

There the beautiful, impressionable girl met Atherton, a dashing youth who swept her off her feet.

Ex-Gov. Cox Chats With Coolidge

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—A 15-minute engagement was extended to more than half an hour when an old political associate of President Coolidge called at the White House today. The visiter was ex-Governor Channing H. Cox.

Mr. Cox said later that he had called merely to pay his respects but that he and the President became interested in a conversation dealing with Massachusetts matters and reminiscences.

He was invited to return to the White House for luncheon.

12 ESCAPE AS FLOOR FALLS

A three-alarm fire today destroyed the one-time home of former Governor Oliver Ames at Massachusetts and Commonwealth aves., Back Bay, causing $50,000 damage to the stock of the National Casket Company, present tenants of the building.

The blaze was a spectacular one. It appeared for a time to menace the entire neighborhood, one of Boston's most exclusive residential districts. Dense smoke hampered the efforts of firemen, more than 50 of whom were obliged to work in masks. Department Chief Daniel F. Bennett and Fire Comr. Hultman directed the battle against the flames.

COUNCILLOR DENIES THERE WAS ANY BLOC LOOKING FOR GRAFT

City Councillor William G. Lynch, whom President Fuchs of the Boston Braves accused of [illegible] graft for himself and 12 other council members for passage of the Sunday sports measure, testified today before the Finance Commission and denied Judge Fuchs' story.

Lynch told of his meeting with Fuchs at the latter's suite at the Copley-Plaza Hotel, and described in vivid language how he tried to punch the baseball magnate because, he said, Fuchs insisted on telling him he (Lynch) was against Sunday baseball.

The accused councillor denied that council members formed a bloc to hold up passage of the Sunday sports order, as Judge Fuchs charged, until they were "taken care of."

Spectators, filling Lorimer Hall at Tremont Temple to its capacity, leaned forward eagerly as Lynch began his story.

One of his first declarations was that he was not a part owner of the heavyweight championship contender, "Jim" Maloney, whose manager is Daniel J. Carroll, one of the leading figures in the present investigation.

Before today's session of the Finance Commission's hearing started Dist. Atty Foley was called into the State's phase of the Sunday baseball inquiry by Atty. Gen. Joseph E. Warner.

2 HURT AS EXPLODING HEATER WRECKS HOME

Explosion of a home-made hot water heater in the home of Victo Moulton in Dayton st., Danvers, today, nearly killed his stepson, Wallace McDonald, 20, and inflicted serious injuries on the boy's mother who was seated upstairs.

The explosion practically wrecked the house, bulging the cellar foundation walls, staggering floors and breaking every window in the structure. Furniture on the top floor was even broken by the concussion.

Young McDonald was hurled across the cellar by the blast, striking the wall and suffering bad burns on face, shoulders and head, and a deep dent in his skull. He is in a critical condition at Hunt Memorial Hospital, Danvers.

His mother, Mrs. Moulton, was seated in a chair in the dining room, directly above the heater.

The blast hurled her upward out of the chair as high as the ceiling. Her head struck the ceiling and when she fell back to the floor she narrowly missed tumbling through a hole that had been made by the explosion. She was taken to the home of a neighbor and treated for burns and shock.

According to Police Sergt. Kerwin and Patrolman Nangle of the Danvers police, who answered a neighbor's telephone call, the upper part of the home-made heater—from the base up—was hurled entirely across the cellar.

M'DONALD ACQUITTED OF 'L' CRASH DEATHS

A jury in Suffolk Superior Court today returned a sealed verdict acquitting Bernard A. McDonald, motorman of the "L" train which left the tracks at the old Beach st. station July 22, causing the deaths of three persons and injuries to others.

The jury reached an agreement at 5:40 yesterday evening, after having been out only two hours and fifteen minutes.

McDonald, who was discharged by the Elevated following the crash, was charged with operating the train in a grossly negligent manner. In his own defense he said he entered the curve just before the accident at a speed of about 10 miles an hour, with the power cut off and the brakes off.

Guards and other employes of the road corroborated this testimony, in modified divergence from that of passengers who testified the train was traveling at a high rate of speed when it left the rails on the curve and crashed into the old station.

CAMERA'S EYE SPOTS ATTEMPT AT MURDER

Detroit, Jan. 10—Two youths, Taylor Pierce, 21, and William Thompson, 22, confessed today, according to the police, that they had participated in the attempted murder of Ralph A. Wood, president of the Wood Construction Company.

Mrs. Grace Wood, estranged wife of Wood, also is under arrest in connection with the plot to kill her wealthy husband, in Wyandotte, a suburb.

Her mother, Dr. Mary Smith, is held as a witness.

The frustration of the plot was recorded by the camera's eye, as cameramen and reporters who had been notified hid in the bushes and watched the shooting.

DOWLING RESTRICTS FIN. COM. INQUIRY TO SPORTS 'BRIBE'

OUTDOOR RECREATION LEAGUE UP TO ATTY.-GEN. WARNER

Asst. Dist. Atty. Frederick T. Doyle was despatched to the State House to confer with Asst. Atty.-Gen. Gerald J. Callahan.

A large detail of police were on hand to maintain order when the Finance Commission hearing got underway.

Hall Crowded, Many Stand, as Hearing Is Resumed

The hearing started at 2.10 with a capacity house, scores of people standing. At the outset Chairman Dowling said he wished to make a statement concerning Secretary Cunningham of the Braves. Dowling said that at the request of Attorney Joseph P. Walsh, counsel for Carroll and Lynch, a constable served a summons on Cunningham at his home, 34 Ellington rd., Wollaston.

"It should be said in justice to Mr. Cunningham," continued Chairman Dowling, "that Mrs. Cunningham told the constable who is today unfortunately ill in bed, that her husband understood he was no longer needed as a witness and had gone to New York for a week.

"Therefore after this hearing is adjourned the commission will fix a date for Mr. Walsh to further examine Mr. Cunningham."

Atty. Walsh:

"One of my associates reminded me that at the time I conferred at the bench with the commission the question of whether we would need Councillor Ward as a witness came up. He was excused. At that time I supposed the person referred to was Mr. Ward instead of Cunningham, whom I certainly desire to examine. This incident may account for the confusion concerning Mr. Cunningham.

"If the chairman's ruling is that the question I have to ask Mr. Cunningham will touch upon the Corrupt Practices Act, I think it is my duty to explain now that my inquiry would deal with the Outdoor Recreation League entirely. Therefore I think it is my duty to state this at this time and not tie up this hearing or threaten a postponement for a week. As my question which I will put to Mr. Cunningham concern only the Outdoor Recreation League, I would like as a matter of record to have the chairman rule on this today."

Chairman Dowling:

"The commission's ruling concerning the Corrupt Practices Act stands."

Walsh: "Then I will obey the ruling. My brother here is resigning."

Atty. Declan W. Corcoran—"No, Mr. Walsh, no useful purpose can be served by recalling Mr. Cunningham if you are only going to question him concerning the Outdoor Recreation League."

Walsh: "I agree."

Dowling: "The commission has ruled on Mr. Walsh's request concerning bank accounts of certain individuals and has prepared a written statement which the secretary will now read."

Innes,' Fuchs' and Other Bank Accounts Probed

Secretary Hobart Cahill read the following statement:

"On the motion of the regular counsel for Messrs. Lynch and Carroll that the bank accounts of Charles F. Adams, at least in Fuchs, of Charles H. Innes, of Orrin J. Brown, secretary of the Outdoor Recreation League, should be produced before this commission and that counsel be given an opportunity to examine them, the commission has decided that the interests of the public in the present investigation, it is agreed at, were upon the books of the proposed National Recreation League, and that it is the intention of the commission to interrogate about the bank books and accounts of Charles F. Adams and of Emil E. Fuchs.

"If any of the foregoing accounts show a diversion of money to the Outdoor Recreation League, or to any persons including Charles H. Innes, the commission will analyze those accounts also.

"The commission will not examine the production of these books for examination at these public hear-tions, but will examine them with the assistance of a certified public accountant in private session.

"If the counsel for said Messrs. Lynch and Carroll has any questions to be answered or any information which would be of advantage to the commission, in ascertaining the truth in the present investigation, he is to submit both questions and information, and, if pertinent and proper, the commission will investigate them."

Walsh: "If the commission pleases, it seems to me that Mr. Cunningham's account should be included, as he testified he wrote checks."

Dowling: "The committee shall include any person who it feels will help throw light on the situation."

Walsh: "It strikes me that if the accounts of Adams and Fuchs are interpreted to come under the Corrupt Practices Act, and they are up in the air on this matter, the same is in the Cunningham incident."

Dowling: "So far as the accounts may aid in the investigation concerning the Outdoor Recreation League or the Corrupt Practices act, we would not handle it here, in that as being investigated by the district attorney's office. So if in connection with bribery charges, we would consider that phase."

Walsh: "My investigation of the books and accounts would not be that of an expert accountant, but would be limited to the question of forged transfer of funds from the Braves fund by the so-called Outdoor Recreation league, or from Adams to the Braves. If not considered at this time, I would be left out in the cold."

Dowling: "If any individual, whether Adams or Fuchs or the Braves or any other agency, is found to have had any transactions which we feel come into the scope of this inquiry, it would be dealt with here, but any phase on the Corrupt Practices Act would be handled by the attorney general."

Mr. Carroll," said the chairman, recalling the boxing promoter to the witness stand.

Carroll took the chair and Dowling said: "Mr. Walsh, you were the witness when the hearing adjourned yesterday."

"Further questions," said Dowling.

Dowling asked the other members of the commission if they wished to ask any questions of Carroll and when they replied in the negative the chairman said: "Thank you, Mr. Carroll."

City Councillor William G. Lynch was the next witness. A stir went through the auditorium as he took the witness chair.

He said he lived at 670 Columbia rd., that he was in the barrel business, which his father owned and which his grandfather had owned before him and which had been functioning for 70 years in South Boston.

—Have you any other business, Mr. Lynch? A.—I am part owner of the M. & M. diner and service station, south Boston.

Q.—Are you part owner of Maloney, the fighter? A.—No.

Q.—Or Honeybug Finnegan? A.—No.

Q.—Now, early in November, do you remember the people voted to accept the Sunday sports bill? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did your district vote? A.—I don't like to give the figure but I didn't vote 'dry.'

Q.—Were you or were you not in favor of the bill? A.—In favor of it.

Q.—Did you ever waiver in your preference for it? A.—No, never.

Q.—Were you one of the 13 who voted to refer the measure when it came before the Boston City Council? A.—Yes.

Q.—What was your reason, Mr. Lynch? A.—We didn't see any need of hurry. It was the ordinary procedure to be taken in such matters. We wished to have a report of the bill before us to know exactly what we were voting on.

Q.—Mr. Lynch, were you here when Mr. Carroll testified yesterday? A.—Yes, sir, I've been here every day.

Q.—Were you at the interview that he testified to? A.—Yes.

Q.—At the meeting interview? A.—No.

Q.—On Nov. 23 when you met Mr. Carroll, what did he say? A.—He told me about the story of me being against the Sunday bill. He said that Judge Fuchs would like me to come to the hotel that evening.

Q.—Did he say how Judge Fuchs found out that you were against the bill? A.—No.

Q.—As far as you know Judge Fuchs was entirely wrong in saying that you were against the bill? A.—I know he was wrong.

Q.—Now you went to the hotel that night about 11:30 didn't you? A.—Yes.

Q.—When you came in to see Judge Fuchs and Cunningham at 11:30 what happened? A.—We walked into the room. Both Judge Fuchs and Cunningham were there. Dan went in first. We knocked on the door before we went in, said that I didn't know whether the door was locked or not, unless it was locked Judge Fuchs told me to enter. I went near the door.

Q.—Was that the first time that you met Judge Fuchs? A.—Yes.

Q.—Go on, please, Mr. Lynch. A.—We stood around talking about the fight we had just been. I sat down on one end of the sofa and about that time Ed Cunningham walked out and shut the door behind him. Judge Fuchs came over and sat down on the other side of the sofa.

Q.—When Cunningham left the room did anyone lock the door? A.—I don't know whether the door was locked or not, unless it was locked when Cunningham went out. I never went near the door.

Q.—Now what happened? A.—Judge Fuchs started in by saying that you were against the bill? A.—I know he was wrong

FIGHTING AMES MANSION BLAZE

BATTLING FLAMES IN HISTORIC BUILDING

Firemen fighting blaze in residence of late ex-Governor Oliver Ames, Massachusetts and Commonwealth aves., early today. The old mansion was damaged to the extent of $50,000. One fireman was injured during the blaze.

SAD STORY IS TOLD IN COURT

White-haired and feeble, Charles D. Moore, 71-year-old ex-inmate of the now defunct Cooper Homestead for aged persons at Dedham, was assisted to the witness stand in Dedham court today to testify against the Homestead's proprietress, Mrs. Helen L. Cooper.

Mrs. Cooper was held in bonds of $1000 for the grand jury after the hearing today before Judge James H. Halloran. She is charged with larceny from Moore, who is alleged to have paid her $1000 last October for "life membership" in her institution.

The Homestead closed recently after Mrs. Cooper had filed a voluntary petition of bankruptcy.

Moore was taken by automobile to Dedham today from Bedford, where he and 17 other "life members" of the Cooper Homestead are being cared for at one of the Florence Crittenden settlement houses.

TURNED OVER $1000.

He told of turning over to Mrs. Cooper funds which included his own savings and $961.50 which was furnished by a German home in Roxbury where, until October, he had membership. The total, he said, was $1000.

From Mrs. Cooper, in return for this payment, Moore testified to receiving a signed agreement which guaranteed him shelter, food, clothing and medical attention for the rest of his life, and which provided that his burial expenses should be paid by the homestead after his death.

The alleged agreement itself was offered in evidence by Asst. Dist. Atty. Edward R. Dewing, government prosecutor.

HOPED FOR SECURITY

Seated in a chair provided for him on the witness stand, Moore, in a voice that frequently faltered, told of his expectation of security for the rest of his days and described his tragic disappointments in finding himself a public charge when Mrs. Cooper's financial affairs became known.

The next witness, Anna Baier, acting treasurer of the German home, Roxbury, corroborated Moore's story of a $961.50 payment. She made out the check to Mrs. Cooper, she said. She offered the check itself in evidence. It was cancelled, she said, and was indorsed by Mrs. Cooper and the latter's daughter.

Appearing in her own defense, Mrs. Cooper testified she "exhausted every resource for the old folks."

STARTED WITH $2000

She started her "home" five years ago, she said, with a capital of $2000. Her income was from room payments by "life members" and from payments of $12 a week from boarders. She also received certain charitable donations, she said, and drew no salary.

In the past two years, according to Mrs. Cooper's testimony, she spent "less than $50," for clothes and personal luxuries.

All her money, she said, went toward the maintenance of the Homestead and toward the care and support of its inmates.

Mrs. Blanche Harriman

Her Mother — Attorney — Mrs. Jennie May Lawley

You can't pay alimony when out of work and have less than $3 in the pocket, Albert Harriman, 55, of Linden st., Malden, protested in Middlesex Probate Court today. Former Mrs. Harriman of Salem appeared on a petition to have him adjudged in contempt. Case continued to March 18. Mrs. Jennie May Lawley, divorced wife of George Irving of Belmont, was given custody of two children, but now wants ex-husband to take the girl. Case continued a month.

SAY GIRL WAS KILLED IN FALL

Springfield, Jan. 10—The body of Miss Rose Alice Haessaert, 20, of Warren, was found today in a Main st. apartment occupied by Gordon Welch, 35, and his sister, Vivian, 30.

Police questioned Welch for several hours after the body was found.

According to Associate Medical Examiner Carl A. Schillander, the girl shortly would have become a mother.

Welch and his sister told police Miss Haessaert had been sleeping with his sister who was awakened by the sound of a fall.

She stepped on the light and discovered Miss Haessaert had rolled out of bed.

Attempts to arouse Miss Haessaert were fruitless and a doctor was called. He pronounced the girl dead and notified the police.

When Dr. Schillander viewed the body he announced tentatively that poison could have induced a discoloration of the body that gradually turned almost black.

Dr. Schillander said he would perform an autopsy.

Welch and his sister said Miss Haessaert appeared to be in perfect health last night.

New Irish Minister to U. S. Noted Diplomat

Dublin, Irish Free State, Jan. 10 (AP)—Michael Macwhite, who has represented the Irish Free State at Geneva since 1927, has been appointed minister to Washington to succeed Timothy Smiddy, recently transferred to London as high commissioner.

Macwhite is a native of West Cork and is regarded as having made a great success with Ireland's interests at Geneva. He has had a varied and adventurous career. The new minister was a soldier in the Balkan campaign and before the World War taught languages for several years in Copenhagen. In 1914, at the outbreak of the World War, he enlisted in Paris in the French Foreign Legion and saw service in France and Africa.

He commanded the last French unit that was left in Serbia and was decorated for bravery.

Macwhite accompanied the French military mission to the United States and lectured in behalf of one of the Liberty loans. Mrs. Macwhite is Danish born.

LEAPS AS TRAIN HITS AUTO

Edmund Wilder, 41, of Plain st., South Braintree, narrowly escaped death today when he leaped from his automobile a fraction of a second before a Braintree-Boston train crashed into the car and carried it 200 feet at the Granite ave. crossing, East Milton.

The locomotive struck Wilder a glancing blow as he leaped from his car. He was taken to the Milton hospital suffering from injuries to the lower part of his back and his right leg.

His car skidded onto the tracks at the crossing when he applied the brakes after sighting the swinging red lantern held by Mrs. Nellie L. Ellis, crossing tender.

"He applied the brakes and his car turned around twice before it landed on the tracks," said Mrs. Ellis. "He leaped out of the car just in time. He was struck a glancing blow and thrown to the ground. The machine was carried about 200 feet. It was wrecked."

BLAMES VOTERS IN CHOICE OF LEGISLATURE

A more strict selection by the people of those representatives will do more to uphold popular respect for the legislative branch of the state government, President Gaspar G. Bacon of the Senate today declared at a luncheon meeting of the Women Republican Club of Massachusetts.

The initiative and referendum, he said, have proved useful for making the sentiment of the people on important questions of policy. But he doubted if they can remedy evils of any permanency or significance.

"The trouble is much more fundamental," he explained. "If the people are either unable or unwilling to choose capable public servants, are they more capable or more willing to govern themselves directly?" he asked.

After asserting his hearers pin representative government has not proved a failure and is the only government suited to this country, he said:

"If the legislatures are unsatisfactory, their evils can be improved if the people will take a little care in the selection of the members thereof and then hold them to a strict accountability."

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 10 (AP)—Construction of reservoirs for power use as a method of diminishing the flood danger in Vermont was recommended by the advisory committee of engineers on flood control which submitted its report to the members of the Legislature today.

LORING BRIGGS CAN'T HELP TRY 'WET' CASE

G. Loring Briggs, former official of the Boston Floating Hospital, who was dismissed from a federal court jury today because he said he was a member of an organization which is supporting the prohibition law.

Briggs was challenged by Judge James M. Morton at the request of Defense Counsel William H. Lewis, after a jury had been impanelled to try Isadore H. Reno, Whitinsville druggist, charged with possession and sale of liquor.

After the jury had been sworn Judge Morton said, following a conference with Lewis:

"On request of counsel I want to inquire if any man is a contributor to or member of any organization supporting the prohibition law?"

Briggs arose and said he was such a man with the result he was dismissed and his place filled and the trial then began.

Inability of John P. Nowlen, private investigator, to identify Reno as the seller of a pint of gin in December, 1927, resulted in a directed verdict of not guilty for Reno on motion of Asst. U. S. Atty. Elihu D. Stone.

Frank E. Whitman, chairman of the Winthrop board of selectmen, on whose initiative Nowlen had been hired to obtain evidence against Reno, was the first witness for the government.

He testified to reports of illegal sales of liquor having been brought to his attention and described his part in obtaining the aid of "side-seller."

Prosecutes Old Friend In Rum Case Reunion

A reunion of two former employes of the Eastern Massachusetts Railway, after a separation of five years, has landed one of them in Federal Court on liquor charges and thrust the other into the role of his prosecutor.

This anticlimax to almost a life-long acquaintanceship was revealed here today before Judge James M. Morton when John S. Wagner of Lexington st., Lawrence, sought, through counsel, to quash an indictment charging him with possession of liquor.

Walter Sullivan, Lawrence and Lowell Federal prohibition sleuth and a former fellow worker with Wagner in defence of his method of obtaining evidence against Wagner, testified he rang a call "through curiosity" on an alley door off Essex st., Lawrence, and Wagner appeared, recognized him and invited him inside "to look the place over." He said he found a bar and a partly filled pint of liquor near a sink.

Wagner denied he invited Sullivan to search the premises.

He declared that someone inside the "bar" opened an inside door through which Sullivan passed after warning him "to stand aside."

Judge Morton ruled in favor of the prohibition agent and dismissed the motion to quash the indictment.

SUSPECT LYNN MAN ROBBED AND SLAIN

Definite suspicions of foul play with robbery as a motive, started Lynn police today on an investigation of circumstances surrounding the death of James Ryan, well-to-do contractor, who was found murdered in his home in Lynn Wednesday night.

Ryan died this morning at the Lynn General Hospital. The cause of death is not yet established.

Ryan was picked up by police officers in a private hackney cab and warned the automobile that a man in a nearby house is suffering. There was a deep wound on the back of his head.

Detailed inquiry into the case was made by Capt. John T. Curry of police headquarters. He learned that Ryan was in the habit of carrying large sums of money and had, in fact, collected a bill on the day before. He was found unconscious.

On his person, when he was picked up, was only $35, and this sum was tucked in a watch pocket, where it might have been overlooked by robbers.

It was further established by Capt. Curry that Ryan had worked on the day before the suspected assault.

Ryan is survived by three sons, Richard of Lynn, Donald of New York and Francis, a war veteran.

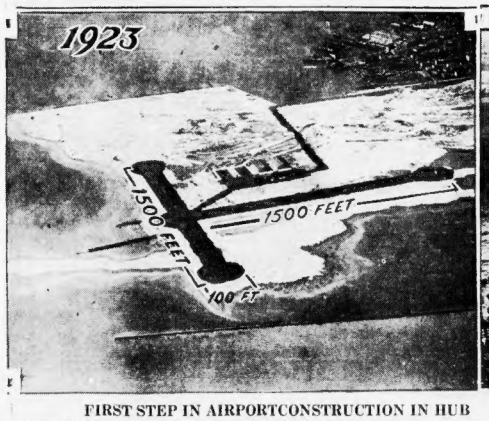
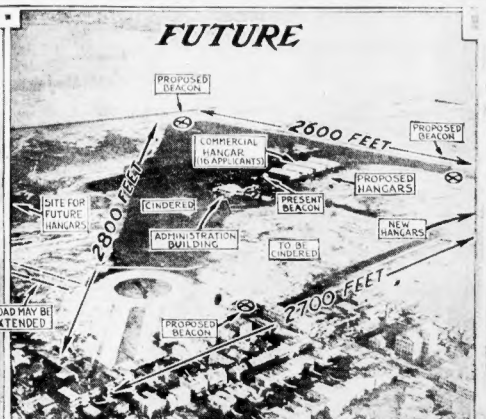
How Boston Airport Has Grown — And How It Will Look — When Completed by the City





FIRST STEP IN AIRPORTCONSTRUCTION IN HUB

Above photo by U. S. Army Air Corps shows the Boston Airport as it was when the official dedication took place on Sept. 8, 1923. The area between the hangars and the runways was rough and the only way to get a plane to the runways to take off was to taxi down the narrow "run-out" shown. The runways were only 1500 feet long and 100 feet wide.

POLICEMAN IN BOY CASE TOLD HE'S RUM-DUM

Liquor was smelled by his lieutenant on the breath of Patrolman Jeremiah J. Pitts on the day he is alleged to have assaulted two Mattapan boys, it was testified today at a public hearing before Police Commissioner Wilson.

Patrolman Pitts, relieved from duty two weeks ago, is charged with conduct unbecoming an officer and with using disrespectful and vulgar language to a superior officer.

According to Lieut. Parker of the Mattapan station, to which Pitts was transferred from the headquarters Jupter squad, he told Pitts that Pitts was "rum-dum and should be in the Psychopathic Hospital."

Earlier on Thanksgiving Day, Lieut. Parker testified, he had smelled liquor on Pitts' breath, but Pitts was not drunk and the lieutenant refrained from making comment.

The boys alleged to have mistreated by the suspended officer are Albert Schumacher, Jr., 14, of Brooks st., and Ambrose Fraser, II, of Mulvey st., both Mattapan.

The Schumacher boy is still under a doctor's care at home, it was testified, but his father, Albert Schumacher, testified his boy came home with black eyes and cut lips.

Young Fraser testified he and Schumacher were running a foot race in Blue Hill ave., when the policeman seized them and began beating them.

Innocent Man Jailed Asks $500 of State

As a result of a hearing today before the House ways and means committee, the attorney-general will be asked to investigate the case of Benjamin F. Collins of Lowell who, after being sentenced to State Prison for purse snatching, was found to be innocent and released. Collins asks that he be compensated to the amount of $500. He served four days in prison and since that time, he says, he has been unable to find work.

New Dictator to Rule After the Style of Mussolini

Vienna, Jan. 10 (INS)—Chiefs of the government in Jugoslavia under the royal dictatorship are going to copy some of the methods of Mussolini, according to advices from Belgrade today.

King Alexander, through Premier Zivkovic, has warned all provincial officials he expects them to "work hard and observe the utmost honesty." The people will be asked to unite in a national movement of hard work and silent effort for the common welfare.

Political dissensions will not be tolerated. The utmost supervision will be exercised by the government, but the press censorship will not be so drastic as in Italy.

BILL BARS NIGHT WORK IN MILLS FOR WOMEN

A bill to prohibit women from being employed in any manufacturing plant after 6 p. m. was today filed with the Legislature on petition of the Massachusetts state branch of the American Federation of Labor. In certain industries now, women are allowed to work until 10 p. m.

No boy under 18 or girl under 21 would be allowed to work in any establishment or occupation before 8 a. m. or after 10 p. m., and in manufacturing, except between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., except girls under 21 who may be used as elevator operators up to 11 p. m.

Too Many Laws

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 10 (AP)—Lieut.-Gov. Stanley C. Wilson, in his address to the Senate today, said that fewer instead of more laws were needed. He also pointed out that no suspicion of corruption had ever tainted the records of the Vermont Legislature.

AIMS NEW LAW AT TAX-PAYERS LEAVING STATE

Persons leaving the State before the end of the year will be subject to a tax on income for that portion of the time they were legal residents, if a bill urged today by Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long before the committee on taxation is enacted into law.

The departure of Edgar B. Davis, Brockton millionaire, for Texas a few days before the end of the year, with a consequent loss to the State of his tax, was cited by Commissioner Long as an example, among others.

The commissioners also asked for authority to fix within specified limits the tax on investment trusts holding securities of a taxable nature. As the law is now framed, he said, such trusts are placed at a tax disadvantage with individuals and other organizations including investment trusts chartered as voluntary associations, holding non-taxable securities.

While for the past decade, he continued, there has been a material increase in the business done by investment trusts, and in view of the fact that those owning taxable securities are placed at a disadvantage, the board they would give up their charter and move to other parts of the country.

Another bill urged by Long was one giving authority to tax yachts, motor boats and vessels of a similar nature at their sale.

Held for Larceny From Aged Woman

charged with larceny in five rooms from Mrs. Marie Dorrer, 70, Beacon Lees widow, by means of worthless stocks, Harry B. Bowl of Somerville and a State st. broker, was arrested in his office today.

Bowl was taken into custody by two Lynn inspectors on a warrant and was booked in Lynn police headquarters where he was released on $5000 bail for arraignment tomorrow.

NEAR COLLAPSE WHEN COURAGE WAS QUESTIONED, NOBILE SAYS

ARCTIC FLIER WAS 'STUNNED' OVER DOUBT OF VALOR

EXCLUSIVE!

INSTALMENT No. 4

By GEN. UMBERTO NOBILE

Commander-in-Chief of the ill-fated North Pole expedition aboard the dirigible Italia last summer.

Copyright, 1929, in North and South America by New York American, Inc. All rights reserved. Reproduction either in whole or in part prohibited. Copyrighted in all other countries by Umberto Nobile.

Rome, Jan. 10.

OF my arrival at Virgo Bay I remember only the scenery of melancholy, grayish mountains, here and there covered with patches of snow, girding in a circle the little bay linked to the memory of the Andree expedition, and then the deck of the Citta di Milano, filled with sailors.

A motor launch came to meet us. I was lifted up and carried on board the ship, amidst the hurrahs of the crew. I had a mortal sadness in my soul, which the warmth of my welcome did not in the least expel. I remembered only the face of an officer, who had tears in his eyes, and Aponte, the journalist, who insistently kissing my hand. All the rest is submerged in darkness.

They carried me to a cabin. The photographers, the cinema operators hurried up to beg me to pose. I refused to do so. It seemed an insult to my grief. After I had escaped them I looked at myself in a mirror for the first time after 32 days. I was horrible, unrecognizable.

A bristly and grayish beard covered my face. I asked for a bath, my sole ardent desire. I was wearing repugnantly dirty clothes.

To Aid Comrades

Meanwhile, I desired Tornberg, Christell and the captain of the ship to join me in my cabin and to decide what to do—to telegraph to Rome for the small sporting aeroplanes provided with skis, and meanwhile to provide for the fixing of the skis to the Finnish trimotor.

I then renewed my request to Tornberg to send a hydroplane that night to the camp, to drop down pemmican and other provisions which I held to be urgent. Immediately after this meeting, I sent the following message to my companions:

"My Dear Ones: Be tranquil. I am here. A Finnish aeroplane is being fitted with skis, but as a prudent measure I have asked two or three small aeroplanes from England. You will receive by means of the Swedes another six batteries, cigarettes, a tent, some medicine, powdered milk, fifty kilograms of pemmican, a stove and solid combustibles.

"But I hope it will not be necessary to use all these things, because I hope to re-embrace you soon. Have you decided to transport the tent to the camping ground? Perhaps it would be best. Give me news of all and be brave as always. Your NOBILE."

My body was on the Citta Di Milano, but my spirit was down there with my dear companions. It was as if I had been torn with violence from my family. My heart, which had also been strong during the hardest trials, seemed not to be able to support the grief of this separation.

I was in this state of mind when the captain of the Citta Di Milano came to me and said:

"General, the fact that you were the first to leave will probably be criticized. It would be opportune to give some explanation."

"I fell from the clouds. Give some explanation? I did not understand. Did the captain of the Citta Di Milano know nothing, therefore, of the order brought by Lundborg?

Hurt by Criticism

I related how things had happened and a little later I summarized the narrative in a wireless note addressed to the Under-Secretary of Marine, in Italy. I must confess, however, that, though very surprised at the question asked me, I had not the slightest suspicion of the terrible story my enemies and those of Italy were raising against me, because I was busy speculating on the accident that had occurred to Lundborg.

I was stricken, stunned. It was a sudden atrocious offense. And how could it be with my past, after all the proofs I had given of my supreme disregard of life and the things dearest to life, than anyone dared to discuss, to criticise the reasons that had inspired my action? How could anyone dare to suspect that, by allowing myself to be transported first by Lundborg, I had had the intention of saving myself first and not that of going away to assume the post of command, at a place where alone it was possible to act, to strive to do the utmost for the rescue of my lost companions?

It was an indescribable bitterness. It filled me with such a profound disgust for humanity that I desired to return there on the ice. The Finnish aeroplane being fitted with skis would soon be ready. I sent for Sarko, the official observer, and learned from him how many persons it could carry. Four, five. Then I should go. As soon as it was ready he would let me know so I could also go in it; and I should have guided it to the tent, where I would have succeeded to give place to my companions, and there I should have remained.

In fact on the 20th of June, the day after my return, I sent the following wireless to my companions of the tent:

"Good. Don't be anxious about the fog. I have decided to come and take you with the aeroplane on skis as soon as it is ready and the weather good. Meanwhile, I have hurried the advance of the Krassin. Greet Lundborg.

"NOBILE."

Was it merely a jest—the desire, perhaps, to throw my scorn in the face of all malignant men, to show them how little had been my wish to come away, that I was decided to return there, and should I return there? No, not this, but a deep instinct to flee from humanity.

There the enemies were the ice, the fog, the drifting, the wind, the crevices, the bears, but one could face these enemies with serenity of spirit and a calm heart.

I did not feel I had the strength to face the malice of men.

I said myself in that little cabin of the Citta di Milano, kept prisoner in that small space by a broken arm and leg. And what did it matter if I no longer kept the promise I had made to my companions to watch over them from my natural post of command, from the only post where it was possible for me to act for them? There are some moments when cowardice takes possession of us. My disgust was too strong.

Under the little room and dirty tent I had left my soul, the better part of myself. It was better to return. It would be easier to live.

BOSTON & YARMOUTH STEAMSHIP CO. Ltd.
OF THE EASTERN STEAMSHIP LINES

Foreword to Fourth Story

IN the first instalment of his vivid narrative of the north, General Umberto Nobile depicted on Sunday the desperate plight of his comrades and himself, marooned on an Arctic ice-pack when their dirigible Italia was wrecked on a return flight from the North Pole.

The second instalment, on Monday, told how Nobile and five companions anxiously waited for the return of aviators who had sighted them. Lieut. Einar Lundborg and Schyberg, the Swedish aviators, finally accomplished a safe landing.

Yesterday, in the third instalment, Gen. Nobile told how he was taken aboard the plane of Lundborg and Schyberg, and was carried by air from the perilous "Red Tent" camp on the ice-pack to the Swedish rescue party's airplane base. Then he was taken to Virgo Bay, whither the Citta di Milano, Nobile's base ship, had hastened.

From the Swedish airplane base Lieut. Lundborg had hastened back in his Fokker to the "Red Tent" party to rescue Nobile's surviving comrades, but his plane had been wrecked in landing on the ice-pack. Later Lundborg and Nobile's companions were rescued from the ice-pack by the Russian ice-breaker Krassin.

Gen. Nobile now continues his defense of the course he took, giving for the first time his own version of what occurred aboard the Citta di Milano during that dramatic period.

'DREAM ISLAND' TO BE RESCUED FROM SEA

Cleveland, Jan. 10 (AP)—A "dream island," sunk in the Pacific ocean off the California coast, is the destination of a fantastic cruise headed by R. M. Bramley, paving contractor, who bought for the expedition the steam yacht Peary from Donald B. McMillan, explorer. She is now in Boston.

Bramley's Island lies under twenty feet of water, it was first revealed to him in a dream while in Cleveland. So vivid was his dream and so inviting was the prospect of twentieth century exploration and discovery in seas sailed for centuries by ships of every nation that Bramley set out in search of his island.

MADE SOUNDINGS

He made soundings for days without success. He gave up the idea and was about to return when persistent promptings to find his "dream island" caused him to charter an airplane for further search. He found it, plainly visible from the cockpit, he said, in fifteen or twenty feet.

Now he means to build a breakwater about the place, pump sand from the bottom of the sea to make new land, and erect thereon a fishing and hunting paradise.

"It may be fantastic," Bramley said, but his investigation of prices of stone for the wall demonstrate his earnestness.

FITTING SHIP

The Peary is a fitting ship for the cruise. Its history is as colorful as some aspects of Bramley's dream. It was built first by the French government as a mine sweeper, but lay in dry dock until a private purchaser fitted it luxuriously as a yacht. Then Commander McMillan bought it for the Arctic expedition of 1925 with Commander Richard E. Byrd. He named it the Peary in honor of Admiral R. Peary.

McMillan, here for a series of lectures, was in negotiations for the sale of the ship to Buhl which planned to make a war vessel of it when Brandley approved yesterday with the purpose stated.

'SKY RAIDERS' THRILLING TALE

A beautiful girl faces death under the ceiling of the clouds. But aid comes and the young aviator who is in love with her flies to her distressed plane in mid-air.

Down on the earth, on the rise of a slope between two grim ranges of mountains, an air mail pilot, who had been making his last trip, lays murdered. His plane has been burned and a package containing $250,000 is missing.

These are just two of the exciting features of "the Sky Raider," a thrilling story of life, love and danger in the air and under, written by Donald E. Keyhoe, aide and companion of the world's most famous flier of the mails—Col. Charles E. Lindbergh.

Keyhoe has put into his story a world of gripping action—and he writes of the daring and courageous pilots of the lonesome service ops as a man who knows them intimately and knows their trials could write.

Who is guilty of the air mail murder?

Who is the "Sky Raider?"

Begin this story next Monday in the Boston Evening American. It starts with a wide open throttle. And there's thrill in every chapter. Next Monday!

Writing Shows Ex-Gov. Fuller Aggressive Man of Firm Opinions

Former State Chief Is Immune to "Mob Psychology" and Displays Traits of Powerful Leadership

Do you wish to have your handwriting analyzed by a famous graphologist?

The Boston Evening American has employed Miss Louise Rice, one of the most noted of graphologists, to give individual study to samples of the chirography of its readers. In today's article she analyzes the handwriting of former Governor Alvan T. Fuller. Send in a sample of your handwriting for analysis. See the blank with this article. Her fourth article follows:

By LOUISE RICE
Famous Graphologist

This specimen of former Governor Fuller's writing would attract the attention of anyone, even a person who had seldom given much thought to the extraordinarily diverse appearance of different scripts.

Ex-Gov. Fuller

It is not often that we see such heavy pressure, such involved and aggressive capitals and such closeness of letters to each other, in a word, the whole making an impression of intense self - sufficiency and aggressiveness not soon forgotten.

"Handwriting is a gesture of the mind."

In that gesture, by far the most unique thing in all this world of unique things, the most secret recesses of heart and soul and even of body are brought to the surface. So illuminating is this specimen of writing, that I do not hesitate to even say that the retiring Governor of Massachusetts could to be especially careful of his direction, and to be sure of getting plenty of outdoor exercise—not only for the reasons which hold good with everyone, but because his physical temperament, as shown by his handwriting, indicates a predisposition to digestive and nerve conditions which can be controlled by such precautions as are suggested.

Has Firm Opinions

The very interesting and unusual capital formations in this name tell me a great deal as to this writer's ideas, preferences and tendencies. He is a man of hard and firmly held opinions. He will not swerve from adhering for any persuasion. He is ludicrously to either pass or loans except from people for whose opinions he has special respect.

He is absolutely impervious to "mob psychology" and is far less sensitive than many. I estimate him as possessed of a certain stern, implacable temper, and of being not as tactful as he might be.

Such aggressive men never are even aware of the constant need for tact and adjustment, for the reason that they do not ask for tact on the part of those who approach them and that they do not mind if others do not make adjustments.

Such a character will interpret Life in terms of the exact science, as it were. To this writer black is black and white is white, and this person will persists in seeing most of the world in varying shades of gray is suffering from bad eyesight.

The deeds of this person will be determined by the convictions of the mind, a mind which does not feel the "pull" of the heart strings, save when they are strictly in accord with the convictions.

Pillar of Society

Such a man is really one of the pillars of society, since he is not apt to be moved from his position of belief and deed, but must bear all the pressure, but it cannot be said that he is exactly an easy man to handle. In his personal life he will bring to bear, again, his rigid convictions.

He will love and bear friendship in direct proportion to his belief that love and friendship are worthy bestowals. Never, never will he be able to understand the fact that many of us are quite capable of loving without being able to sum and think about the worthiness of the recipient of our attachments.

Never, never will he understand the man who wants to be good, but succeeds in being pretty bad, sometimes.

Such a mind as this is a splendid engine. It functions without weakness, it works almost automatically, it is possessed of that ability to reason in a straight line which is not as common as we would like to think it is.

Alvan T. Fuller

DIRIGIBLE SAFE AT MOORING; FOUGHT GALES

Part St. Joe, Fla., Jan. 10—The navy dirigible Los Angeles, which groped about in a heavy fog over western Florida last night, battling gales, poked its nose landward the clouds over St. Joseph's Bay at 11:30 a. m., eastern standard time, today.

She proceeded toward the temporary Pataka, anchored a half-mile off shore, and was moored to the mast at 12:45 p. m., after circling the bay.

The giant craft had been forced from mooring last night after her arrival over Florida by inadvisable winds, which for a time threatened to wreck her off her course and gave rise to fears for her safety.

FROM EASE.

When first sighted here today the dirigible, on a cruise from its New Jersey base, was approaching from the east, cruising leisurely.

Virtually everyone of this infant resorts of this tiny gulf coast town rushed into the streets to greet the graceful liner. Many persons from surrounding towns who had learned that the craft was coming also were here.

WIND ABATES.

A light rain that had fallen shortly before the dirigible's arrival had stopped and a strong sun was attempting to peep through a heavy fog bank that had hung over the bay since last night.

A mild wind that had whipped across the bay and stowed up the airship's progress across the state had abated and conditions were becoming more favorable for a mooring at the Pataka.

JEALOUS HUBBY RAIDS IRENE BORDONI

New York, Jan. 10—Broadway was informed that E. Ray Goetz and Irene Bordoni have so definitely disagreed that suit for divorce by Goetz is imminent.

The reported rift has been the talk of the White Way for days—even for the two months that the two have not been seen in each other's company. But when the Music Box Theater Tuesday night refunded several thousand dollars in ticket money that had been in advance, Broadway cupped its ears and leaned forward.

Especially since the Music Box did this because Miss Bordoni was reported ill. And more especially since her illness was attributed to a raid staged on her home at No. 108 East Seventy-eighth st. at 2 a. m., on Tuesday by no others than operatives in the employ of Goetz, led by Goetz in person.

WHO KNEW THAT?

Broadway gasped when it was told that Goetz dashed, as did the operatives employed by him, that they had found Miss Bordoni not alone but with someone else—and that someone else a man.

When the detectives started to climb back out of the window through which they entered Miss Bordoni's home, she is said to have thrown a stiletto in the direction of the departing sleuths, rendering the left arm of one o the operatives temporarily inoperative.

For many weeks Broadway has noticed what it believed to be a growing friendship between Goetz's wife, and Galen Bogne whose job with Goetz's wife was obtained for him by no less a person than Goetz.

DENIED PLANNING SUIT.

When this reached the ears of Goetz he became so interested that he put the operatives on the trail.

It was said that this was as much as six weeks ago. But only a few days ago Irene, in the public prints denied she would sue for a divorce as "it might spoil her plans"—then she would no say what her "plans" were. She would not, however, deny that she might sometime marry someone who is not her manager, adding "it is very foolish to marry your manager."

It is said that when she left the theater Monday night detectives followed her to her home in another car. A few minutes later Goetz and his aides arrived. A ladder was procured. Up the ladder went a detective. Smash went a pane of glass.

Click went the window latch. And in went Goetz and his aides. They went, so they said, to Irene's room and opening the door they found Irene—and they found a man, also, according to their statement.

Whereupon Goetz walked down the stairs—and out of the house by the front door. The detectives left the window open, which is when the statuette incident occurred.

Broadway is now watching for the filing of the suit that will remove Irene from Goetz's future plans, and pave the way for a new romance—in case Miss Bordoni has that idea in mind.

LORD BURGHLEY AND LADY MARY SCOTT WED

London, Jan. 10 (AP)—Lord David Burghley, son and heir to the Marquis of Exeter and famous hurdler and Olympic champion, and Lady Mary Scott, daughter of the Duke of Buccleuch, were married this afternoon in the old-time church of St. Clement Danes on the Strand.

The church was beautifully decorated with mimosa and lilac. The bride wore a frock of ivory satin cut on medieval lines with tight-fitting bodice and long closely-fitting sleeves.

A long train, lined with gold lace, fell from her shoulders, with a small lace veil tucked under one corner of the hem for luck. Her veil was fastened with a wreath of myrtle and orange blossoms and she wore a necklace of pearls.

Two little page boys, one of whom was Lord Tisdale, nephew of the bride, carried the train. Eight maids were in attendance.

Lord Martin Cecil was best man for his brother. The Bishop of Fitchburn officiated. The church was thronged.

Lord Burghley won the interscholastic hurdling championship in America three years ago and the 400-meter hurdles title at the 1928 Olympic games. The bride also is interested in sports and is a brilliant horsewoman.

SHE WANTS HER FREEDOM

Countess Pierre de Jumilhac, the former Constance Coolidge, Boston heiress, has applied for a Paris divorce. She married Fay Atherton, American diplomat, when she was 17, divorced him in China, where he was stationed, and in 1924 married the count. This International Newsreel picture was taken in 1922 after a thrilling rescue by marine guards at Peking during fighting of rival Chinese forces.

DRY LAW SETS 'AN EXAMPLE'

Washington, Jan. 10 (INS)—On the theory that the National capital ought to set a prohibition example to the country, Mal. Edwin B. Hesse has submitted to Congress a homedry law for Washington so drastic that even the drys in Congress themselves are fearful of it.

Hesse's plan would make the buyer of liquor equally guilty of a felony with the seller, make every Washington policeman a dry agent, make the mere possession of liquor a felony, set up a special prohibition court, and give the superintendent of police authority to issue warrants on mere suspicion.

Fitchburg Man Found Dead

Portland, Me., Jan. 10 (AP)—Rollin A. Fields, 60, a traveling salesman of Fitchburg, Mass., died while reading a book shortly before midnight, a fellow salesman discovered upon entering his hotel room today. Death was due to natural causes.

CLASH OVER HOLIDAY BILL

The proposed creation of an unpaid commission of three to study and report on the advisability of readjusting holidays in Massachusetts met with opposition today at the first hearing of the legislative session before the committee on legal affairs.

Senator Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, petitioner for the commission, declared that there is a lot of sentiment among members of the Chamber of Commerce, allied industries and labor men for such readjustment.

One of his arguments was that Armistice Day, declared a legal holiday at the last session, is not being observed by a closing down of business by many of the retail stores. He said there is sentiment also for having holidays changed to Saturdays.

Senator Kincaide said Governor Allen was in favor of such a commission.

LONGSHOREMEN BOOM U.S. TRADE

Portland, Me., Jan. 10 (AP)—The International Longshoremen's Association will appeal to members of congress, businessmen and business organizations throughout the country to foster a program of legislation destined not only to maintain American business through American ports, but to give American merchant marine a new lease of life, local officers of the organization announced today.

The movement, started here a few days ago, to protect Portland and other Atlantic coast ports against continued diversion of American export trade to Canadian ports, will be enlarged to a national campaign, they said, directed by Joseph P. Ryan of New York, head of the organization, who already had investigated conditions here.

Student Vanishes On Way to Dartmouth

West Haven, Ct., Jan. 10 (AP)—William H. Cox, 18, left home last Saturday to return to Dartmouth College at Hanover, N. H., and has failed to make his appearance there. It was announced by police authorities today. He left New Haven at 10:30 o'clock and has not been seen or heard from since. His parents are at a loss to account for his disappearance.

Cox is a graduate of the West Haven high school and has been interested in music. When he left here last week he was carrying a suitcase and a guitar.

Newport Society Wife Gets Divorce

Providence, Jan. 10 (INS)—An absolute divorce and the custody of her three children today was granted Mrs. Ulrica Dahlgren Hubbard, of Newport and Philadelphia, from John F. Hubbard by Judge Hugh Baker in Superior Court. Mrs. Hubbard, who is in France, charged neglect to provide.

Two of the children, Ulrica, 10, and Joseph W. Drexel Hubbard, 7, are in France with their mother, while the third child, Louise Drexel Hubbard, 8, is with the grandmother, the latter testified.

URGE BASINS TO CHECK FLOODS IN VERMONT

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 10 (AP)—"The only feasible method of diminishing flood flows in Vermont consists in constructing reservoirs for power use," said the report of the advisory committee of engineers on flood control made to Governor John E. Weeks and the public service commissioner and submitted to the Vermont Legislature today.

The committee recommends a comprehensive control of the river systems of the state, including the formation and direction of river power districts, through the state public service commission.

This would enable storage and power projects to be carried out according to a state-wide plan and would insure that all structures on rivers be planned and constructed with a view to public safety.

The public service commission should be clothed with power to review all plans, control the manner of construction and investigate the safety of existing dams and other river structures.

The commission did not recommend that the state make direct appropriation for storage reservoir projects to prevent floods, but stated that it encourages in every way possible the development of such projects by the power companies, under proper state control and supervision.

Four More Revere Officials Submit Their Resignations

Mayor Andrew A. Casassa of Revere today found the resignations of four city officials awaiting him when he arrived at his office in City Hall.

They were from William A. Barrett, chief clerk of the public works department; Wendell P. Murray, city solicitor; Patrick J. Murphy, building inspector, and George H. Mitchell, city engineer for eight years.

If the mayor accepts the resignations, successors to these officials will be named at next Monday evening's meeting of the City Council.

Preferred Death to Reform School

Bristol, Ct., Jan. 10—Evelyn King, 17, of Claremont, N. H., who had been detained by police for breaking parole from a reform school in the New Hampshire town, was found today with a bullet wound through her abdomen.

She was given the liberty of the station, and procured a pistol from a cabinet.

She had a picture of Edward Johnson, a factory worker here, clutched in her hand. She came to Bristol to find work but after she had been detained for breaking parole she decided on suicide rather than be taken back to the reform school. She may die.

URGE ARREST OF 'DOPED' AUTO DRIVERS

An amendment to the law to permit the arrest and prosecution of anyone operating motor vehicles under the influence of exhilarating or stupefying drugs was urged today by Registrar of Motor Vehicles George A. Parker at a hearing before the legislative committee on legal affairs.

The amendment is based on a recommendation made by former Public Works Commissioner William F. Williams.

Parker explained that he now has authority only to suspend the license of such operators. Fortunately, he added, there are but a few of these cases coming to his attention.

Day Baker, representing the Massachusetts Auto Dealers' Association, put his organization, the Boston Auto Dealers' Association, and the Massachusetts Safety Council on record in favor of the bill.

The registrar also spoke in favor of a measure to authorize police officers to arrest without warrant any person operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, irrespective of his possession of a license to drive.

He estimated that 5 or 6 per cent of fatal accidents are caused by drunken drivers.

NEW MANAGERS FOR DURANT MOTORS

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—W. C. Durant, head of the Durant Motors, Inc., today announced he was relinquishing "complete management" of the corporation to a new group of executives who have become "heavily interested financially with us."

The announcement was made in an address before Durant dealers at the Roosevelt Hotel, and although he did not disclose the names of the new leaders, Durant said "they stand head and shoulders above any group of executives in the industry."

Durant, however, did announce with the statement that his interests reached into many fields and the time had come for him to obtain increased leisure and relaxation.

"I have realized, too," he said, "that the highly competitive condition of our industry demands the undivided attention and closest application of those who direct the destinies of our business." He added that he is "not retiring from business."

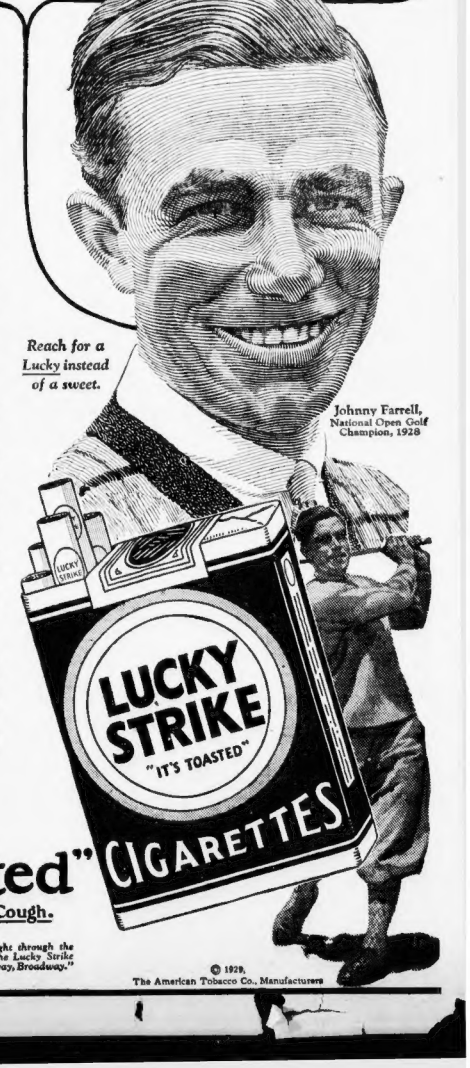
"Pass me a Lucky - I pass up the sweets." Johnny Farrell

Johnny Farrell, National Open Golf Champion, 1928



WHEN fattening sweets tempt and you dread extra weight, light a Lucky instead. No discomfort, no trouble—just a common sense method of retaining a slender figure.

The finest tobaccos are skilfully blended to make Lucky Strike. Then, "It's Toasted." This secret process brings out every essence in the tobaccos and produces a flavor which makes Lucky Strike a delightful alternative when you crave fattening sweets—there is no interference with a natural appetite for healthful foods. That's why folks say: "It's good to smoke Luckies."

Reach for a Lucky instead of a sweet.

Johnny Farrell, National Open Golf Champion, 1928

At the same time toasting removes impurities. That's why 20,679 physicians are on record that Lucky Strike is less irritating than other cigarettes. That's why prominent athletes have testified that Luckies steady their nerves and do not impair their physical condition. No wonder that this was discovered long ago by many men, who pride themselves on keeping trim and fit who love the "pep" that comes with health and vigor.

A reasonable proportion of sugar in the diet is recommended, but the authorities are overwhelming that too many fattening sweets are harmful and that too many such are eaten by the American people. So, for moderation's sake we say:—

"REACH FOR A LUCKY INSTEAD OF A SWEET."

"It's toasted"

No Throat Irritation - No Cough.

BELGRADE BARS ALL MEETINGS

Belgrade, Jugoslavia, Jan. 10 (AP)—All public assemblage has been forbidden in order to terminate all political discussions. The decree ordering this was issued by Gen. Peter Zivkovitch, premier, on behalf of King Alexander.

At the same time that the right of assemblage was announced as being suspended, it was learned that the police had raided, searched and sealed the premises of the metal industries club in Belgrade.

A Zagreb newspaper said that one of the first undertakings of the new government would be to organize the national finances so as to make the best use of natural resources and that everything would be done to induce foreign capital to enter the country.

Dollar's Shrinkage Since 1913 Is 37½ Cents

The dollar of today is worth about 62½ cents as compared to the dollar of 1913, according to a report made public today by the Special Commission on the Necessaries of Life.

Since 1913, the report points out, wages have advanced over 100 per cent, whereas the advance in the cost of commodities has jumped but 60 per cent.

The report states that many families are willing to sacrifice necessaries to retain certain luxuries.

Worcester, Jan. 10—Mayor Michael J. O'Hara today ordered an audit of the books in the street department and the department of public welfare.

BOY IS SHOT AT WEST LECTURE

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—Robert W. Lilmbert's lecture on "The Old West" before the Lake Forest Young Men's Club ended in unexpected gunfire and the wounding of 15-year-old Francis Kelly.

"And now, gentlemen," said Limbert, an explorer, marksman and writer on the wild West, "I will illustrate how a Westerner would treat one of your city gunmen to the draw."

Young Kelly volunteered from the audience to assist. The lecturer handed him a pistol and stuck another in his own holster.

The boy shouted, "Stick 'em up," at the same time starting to level his weapon. Limbert's right hand shot to his holster. His own flashed, and a bullet burrowed into Kelly's knee.

College Boys Slouchy? Dean Wants to Know!

Washington, Jan. 10 (AP)—Does the typical collegian have socks, but no garters? Is his shirt and collar rumpled and his suit habitually wrinkled? Is there any connection between the attempt to be "collegiate" and such problems as drinking, "necking" and neglect of class work?

Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of men at George Washington University, thinks the answer to the question is no, but he wants information on the subject and to that end he has sent questionnaires to the deans of 400 leading colleges. He plans to present his survey before the annual convention of the Association of Deans and Advisors of Men in Washington, April 11, 12 and 13.

In his letter, Dean Doyle said that he was sure college authorities had felt concern and sometimes chagrin "over the mental picture of the collegiate boy and girl which the general public has apparently created during recent years."

Football Captain Helps to Save Boy

Oliver Martin, 12, of 50 Kenwood dr., Lynn, had a narrow escape from drowning when he broke through the ice and fell into Stules pond while on his way to the Pickering school, Commons ave.

Attracted by the child's cries, Lewis Johnson, football captain of the Practical Arts high school, and George Southwick attempted to go to his rescue on foot, but broke through the thin ice at the edge of the pond. Securing a ladder, they worked their way out upon the treacherous covering and pulled the shivering youngster from the frigid water.

NEW OIL WELLS SPOUT FIRE

Whittier, Cal., Jan. 10 (AP)—Pillars of flame 150 feet high marking the location of two new oil wells here, endangered millions of dollars' worth of property in the Santa Fe Springs field today. Cement was being forced down nearly oil wells in the hope of preventing the fire from spreading through the forest of derricks.

The wells, both gushers, caught fire soon after "blowing in." The first was Well No. 160 of the General Petroleum Company. It threw up mud and then burst into flames. Shortly afterward a new well, known as Getty No. 20, caught fire.

FERRARIN MAY TAKE BIG HOP

Rome, Jan. 10 (AP)—It was understood today that Capt. Arturo Ferrarin would pilot the Rome-New York air voyage of which Gen. Italo Balbo, undersecretary for aviation, spoke when he was leaving New York, although Commander Francisco De Pinedo may be the pilot.

A semi-official announcement said "one of the greatest Italian aces" will accompany the undersecretary on a flight to America."

Capt. Ferrarin with the late Maj. Carlo del Prete flew from Rome to South America last year and Commander De Pinedo in 1927 made a flight to the Americas.

FREEZING LAKE HALTS BORDER RUM-RUNNERS

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 10 (AP)—Winter is bringing the rum runner and the coast guards men closer and closer to grips.

The east end of Lake Erie, scene of activity for the transformation of Canadian liquor to the United States throughout the summer and fall is freezing, and the illicit trade across the lake is suspended until such time as the ice becomes thick. Then ice boats will be employed and the trade resumed.

But today all running activities have shifted to Niagara river, the swift-flowing boundary stream which never freezes, and to combat the situation M. W. Rasmussen, commander in charge of the local coast guard district, is assembling the largest force which ever has done duty along the shores of the Niagara. A normal force of 30 men is being augmented by 50. Nearly all the total of 80 will be on duty nights to prevent the landing of cargoes.

ROUND-WORLD, NON-STOP AIR RACE PLANNED

Wichita, Kan., Jan. 10 (AP)—The most daring project of aviation—an attempted nonstop flight around the world—which heretofore had been regarded as beyond the realm of possibility, today appeared near realization with in the present year.

Furthermore, announcements of projected flights, made here and in Paris yesterday suggested the possibility of a race to realize that dream of all endurance and distance fliers. Both flights would be refueling ventures and were suggested by the sustained flight of 150 hours made by the American army monoplane Question Mark in California.

From a sick bed, recovering from severe illness and an operation, Col. Arthur C. Goebel, noted distance and speed pilot, announced that he intended to be first to take the air in an effort to girdle the globe without a stop. He tentatively set August or September for the flight, which he said would be west-to-west from Wichita to Wichita.

Almost simultaneously it was revealed in Paris that the latest project of the Fokker aviation firm was a nonstop flight in the same direction from Paris to Paris, possibly in June, when it was believed the best weather would be encountered.

Life Prison Terms For Second Offenders

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—State's Attorney John A. Swanson dusted off the habitual criminal act of Illinois today in his campaign against crime.

Under this act robbers and burglars can be sent to prison for life on second convictions.

Three cases have been prepared for reindictment and Swanson has ordered a survey of 2001 others to determine if many of those awaiting trial can be sent to the penitentiary for life.

Australia Burning Up in Summer Heat

Sydney, New South Wales, Jan 10 (AP)—Terrific heat of 108 degrees Fahrenheit has been responsible for numerous brush fires in the outer suburbs and farther inland. A dozen homes and a quantity of livestock, orchards and crops have been destroyed.

One fatality which was camping was encircled by flame. A party of horsemen dashed through the fiery circle and rescued two women and four children, but emerged with their own clothing blazing and their arms burned.

FOUR-CENT GAS TAX ASKED IN VERMONT

Montpelier, Vt., Jan. 10 (AP)—Governor John E. Weeks, delivering his message to the joint assembly of the Legislature today, recommended increasing teh gasoline tax from 3 to 4 cents to be used with other gas tax revenue and income from the motor vehicle department to build 125 miles of hard surfaced roads during the coming two years.

He said that this could be done with the expected increase in revenue from these sources, provided other revenue was provided for paying off the flood bonds.

"It is my belief," the Governor said, "that an emergency obligation, such as the recent flood bonds issue, should be met by emergency provisions and the retirement achieved by special revenues obtained for that specific purpose, without encroachment upon the established revenues of the State.

"Upon this theory of public policy I would suggest as possible methods of meeting this emergency the enactment of such special measures as a small direct State tax, an amusement tax and readjustment of the fees for registration of motor vehicles.

"In considering the possibility of a direct State tax for this purpose it must be born in mind that it is not in excess of the State tax of 1927, as that tax was authorized for two years only."

Believe Parts From Amundsen's Plane

Oslo, Norway, Jan. 10 (AP)—It was stated today that wreckage found on the Finmarks coast, marked "Latham-Paris," was not a lifebuoy but two inflatible parts fastened together. It was understood the wreckage was found on the western side of North Cape on New Year's day.

Roald Amundsen and five companions were flying toward Spitzbergen in a French Latham seaplane in June, when they disappeared. Since the end of August various pieces of wreckage have been picked up at sea off the coast of Norway, and one was positively identified as having been a float on the Amundsen plane.

It was generally believed this indicated that the craft had broken up and the all members of the party were dead.

YOUR CHEAPEST NECESSITY— FIRE INSURANCE

Your fire insurance dollar pays for indemnity—for immunity against financial loss when calamity overtakes you. But that dollar buys so much more than the indemnity it pays for that it ranks as one of the most profitable dollars you spend. Its purchasing power is away above the average

Fire insurance, from the indemnity standpoint alone, is one of the cheapest of present-day necessities. Its cost has consistently declined—even during the period of war inflation—practically every year for the last twenty.

And this in spite of the fact that insurance service—as rendered by the 229 Stock companies constituting the National Board of Fire Underwriters—has multiplied its activities for the public welfare and greatly enlarged their scope.

Your fire insurance dollar may pay for indemnity only, but for good measure the Stock Fire Insurance companies provide engineering and research services to make life and property safer—laboratories in which to test materials and devices—scientific hazard measurements—building construction codes—arson detection and investigation—organized fire prevention—and many other voluntary measures designed to lower the fire waste and thereby reduce the cost of fire insurance.

All the mechanics of underwriting as conducted by the Stock Fire Insurance companies—which transact more than nine-tenths of the fire insurance business of this country—are in the public interest.

That the public may know how and why this is so, the companies propose to discuss some of the vital insurance questions.

This is the first of the series of messages. Your attention is invited to succeeding chapters, appearing at frequent intervals.

A clearer understanding of what Stock Fire Insurance really means and does—and a greater public use of its facilities—should result in a still further reduction of the fire waste and a consequently greater service to the insuring public.

BAKER FAVORS GOODWIN COMPULSORY INSURANCE BILL

SAYS MOTORISTS SHOULD PAY BILL AT COST

Hearty endorsement of the bill of Frank A. Goodwin, former State registrar of motor vehicles, to supply compulsory automobile insurance at cost, thus saving $7,500,000 to Massachusetts motorists every year, comes from Day Baker, chairman of the legislative committee of Massachusetts Automobile Dealer and Garage Associations, Inc.

The Boston Evening American is co-operating with former State Registrar of Motor Vehicles Goodwin in his battle to decrease the cost of compulsory automobile insurance.

Baker is regarded as an authority on the subject. Only two days ago he addressed hundreds of members of the National Automobile Dealers' Association at their sixth eastern district convention at Hotel Commodore, New York city on compulsory insurance.

DAY BAKER

INSURANCE AT COST

Baker agrees with Goodwin that it is an imposition on the motorists of Massachusetts for the private insurance companies to take $7,500,000 yearly from car owners' pockets that should remain there. He believes, with Goodwin, that it is grossly unfair for motorists to be charged $2,000,000, which goes in commissions, alone, to insurance agents. He further agrees with the contention of the former State registrar of motor vehicles that as the State compels the motorist to insure his car to protect the public against accident and death, that it should furnish this insurance service at cost.

"I heartily endorse the bill of Goodwin," said Baker, "because it will save cost to the motorist, save lives on the road and reduce the number of cases in court. I believe that more than half of the money recovered in law suits, etc., has been absorbed by attorneys, which is not what the compulsory insurance law sought to accomplish.

"If the insurance lobby is not too strong at the State House this bill may be passed.

"One of the greatest sources of dissatisfaction with our present compulsory insurance law in Massachusetts has been the zoning system as rates. The registration fees for motor vehicles are uniform all over the State and a motor vehicle is authorized to travel over any highway in the Commonwealth, therefore the majority of car owners have felt that the rate for each size and classification should be uniform throughout the Commonwealth, as provided in Goodwin's bill. I regard his flat rate of $16 for every passenger car, $25 for every truck and $50 for buses, taxis and rental cars as one of the strongest features of his bill.

COSTS INCREASE

"As a result of the arbitrary fixing of rates the commercial motor vehicle users and particularly the fleet operators, have had their operating costs increased by thousands of dollars.

"But the compulsory insurance advocates tell us that adoption of compulsory law has saved many lives by making motor vehicle drivers more careful—and that such saving of life amply pays for the additional cost of the motor vehicle owner.

"It may be fairly claimed that compulsory liability insurance has not been the means of reducing accidents.

"A resultant evil of the compulsory insurance law has been that where defendants without resources in accident suits have caused property damage losses only to others, the claimants have many times falsely alleged or greatly exaggerated personal injury for the sole purpose of forcing insurance companies to make settlements theoretically for personal injuries, but actually for property damage loss.

"This last mentioned evil has, so it is claimed, forced the insurance companies to settle a large number of claims, amounting to millions of dollars and now the insurance companies are asking for an increase in rates for the coming year so as to reimburse them for these unjust claims.

"Figures show that the insurance companies took $16,806,377 from motor vehicle owners. They paid out for fatalities and injuries only $6,027,849 (for 24,988 cases). They want to hold as reserve for the settlement of only 12,531 claims, $5,510,282.

COMPELLED BY STATE

"Now practically every owner of a motor vehicle is aware of the fact that he is paying tribute to insurance agents, brokers and companies and is being compelled to do it by the State of Massachusetts. He also knows that much of his money has gone to crooked lawyers and doctors and that the insurance companies are not only unable, but not overanxious to prevent this wholesale robbery because they know the motorists must pay the freight in the end.

"To the layman it would seem that the insurance companies were altogether too ready to settle a just claim of the character to which I have referred, depending upon the insurance commissioner to increase the rates to a point sufficient to take care of those illegal losses, thus throwing the additional burden on the motor vehicle owners.

COURTS CROWDED

"As a by-product of the Compulsory Motor Vehicle Liability law our courts of the Commonwealth are crowded with motor vehicle cases.

"Our compulsory insurance law does not require insurance to cover property damage. Former Insurance Commissioner Monk called attention to the resulting crop of cases of "nervous shock," when the only real damage was probably damage to the car.

"And now to add to the burdens of the motorist new rates have been announced for the year 1929 which will take from the pockets of the Massachusetts motorists approximately $2,000,000 to $4,000,000 additional to the $16,806,377 it cost them in 1927.

"The increased rates strike home hard to the dealers. They mean a dropping off in sales, especially of used cars.

"People who have a little money to put in a car will not purchase with the new rates so high."

Struggle for Nicholas' Job as Royalist Head

Cannes, France, Jan. 10 (AP)—The struggle for succession to the position held by Grand Duke Nicholas as official leader of the Russian royalists, seemed today already to have started although the tomb had hardly closed over the grand duke's remains.

Neither partisans of Nicholas, however, nor those of Grand Duke Cyril, who many Russians regarded as the rightful ruler of their native land, have yet made formal declarations. Partisans of Nicholas believe his papers will contain his views.

Those close to Nicholas intimated that his feeling against Cyril for inactivity in organizing white Russian refugees against the present regime would prevent Nicholas from suggesting him as his leader.

It was generally believed that the Russians would call a general meeting to nominate another leader.

MAN IS BURNED TO DEATH

West Tisbury, Jan. 10—Edgar West, 75, was burned to death early today when fire destroyed his cottage home which neighbors believed unoccupied.

The house was discovered in flames shortly after midnight, and being located some distance off the main road, it was with difficulty that the firefighters reached it. When help did arrive no effort was made to save either the burning structure as it was believed that West was away. His wife is employed as a housekeeper some distance from the West home and knew nothing of the fire.

Warns of Land Fraud In Boulder Dam Area

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP)—Asserting that settlers and land buyers already have been defrauded of hundreds of thousands of dollars by unscrupulous promoters in the area below the projected Boulder dam, Federal Land Office Register R. B. Smith issued a warning here today to prospective purchasers.

Most of the frauds, Smith said, are connected with lands claimed to be within the irrigation areas "likely" to be designated by the Government in a development program to follow completion of the dam itself.

SECOND WITCH SLAYER SMILES AT TRIAL

York, Pa., Jan. 10—With his mother sitting beside him in the defendant's dock, crying softly, Allen Curry, 14, was placed on trial today, charged with the murder of Nelson D. Reimeyer, aged farmer-recluse.

Young Curry, Wilbert G. Hess and John Blymyer, a "pawwow doctor," indicted Reimeyer, whom they believed to be a witch, to death on the night of November 27 last.

Blymyer, the first of the trio to be tried, was sentenced last night by a jury which found him guilty to life imprisonment.

Curry and Hess were brought into court this morning. Immediately Curry's attorneys demanded a separate trial for the boy. This was granted automatically.

TRIAL IS SPEEDED

The boyish, apple-cheeked, black-haired Curry smiled jauntily as he gazed around the crowded courtroom. He paid little attention to his mother, Mrs. Anna Curry McLaine, who sat just back of him, a handkerchief to her eyes.

Hess, who is 18, a skinny, gawky bond youth, seemed frightened as he sat in court, shackled to a deputy sheriff. He had none of the appearance of Curry or of Blymyer. After Curry's trial got under way, Hess was sent to the York County jail, where Blymyer is confined in a cell awaiting the day when he will begin serving his life term in the Eastern penitentiary at Philadelphia.

WAS LED BY BLYMYER

The defense sought to show that Blymer dominated Curry. Through one witness, Clayton A. Hess, who admitted driving Blymer, Curry and his own brother, Wilbert, to Farmer Rehmeyer's house, the defense brought out that Blymer "did most of the talking."

"On the way there Blymyer did the talking," said the witness. "He said: 'I gave to work on Rehmeyer's mind. I'll get him under my control. I'll get a lock of his hair and break the spell he has put over us."

Later the witness added, Blymyer said: "I'm at fault for what happened."

Reimeyer had meantime been slain.

Another witness, Frank Lantz, a clerk, testified that Blymyer had bought three pieces of rope at Schwartz's where Curry was with him, the day preceding the set. Blymyer bought the rope.

The rope was later used to strangle Reimeyer.

EYE OF CAMERA RECORDS PLOT OF ASSASSINS

of Wood, was shot when State troopers and deputy sheriffs who had been "tipped off," frustrated the plot.

Cecil Holt of Wyandotte, who divulged the plot, told Roy Smith, chief of police of Riverview, a suburb, that Mrs. Wood had paid a premium on the $125,000 insurance policy in return for his promise to aid in the plot.

The Riverview chief immediately notified police of Detroit and Wyandotte and a trap was laid. When four gunmen went to Wood's office the building was surrounded with armed guards. Wood also was there and he, too, had a gun.

As police watched, two of the gunmen walked up to the building that houses the construction company and crept through heavy shrubbery between it and the street. There they hid behind two large ornamental urns that flank the office door.

Holt, in accordance with a prearranged plan, whereby he was ostensibly to carry out his part in the plot, brought Wood to the door. Both of the gunmen sprang forth with pulled blackjacks.

Wood and Lawson Chapman, chief of police of Wyandotte, opened fire at the same time, and several policemen sprang from hiding places and joined in the gunfire. Thompson dropped instantly, while his companion ran, shooting back at the officers.

The plot is said to have been laid by Mrs. Wood while under the influence of Dr. Wood's estate and financial difficulties.

Medical Examiner Leary ruled death was due to asphyxiation by illuminating gas. Investigation by the medical examiner revealed that for the past few days Miss Chirafe had been in ill health, and her suicide was believed due to her despondent condition.

Confessions in Plot to Kill Millionaire

Detroit, Jan. 10 (INS)—Following are the confessions, as given to police, of Mrs. Grace Wood's alleged plot to kill her husband, Ralph Wood, 55, millionaire real estate operator.

By CECIL HOLT

"I've known the Woods about three months, but never knew anything about their domestic troubles. I bought my home from Wood, which I am paying for on a contract. My home was deeded to Mrs. Wood when the Woods separated.

"On November 10, while walking in the Kinsks road, a little way from the Wood office, I was hit by something and knocked out.

"Wood borrowed police blackjack and gave it to me and told me to report on the accident, same to the driver of the car which hit Holt, in accord with the Woods-police plot.

SENT FLOWERS

"I revived later in the Wyandotte Hospital and there was a big bunch of flowers in my bed. They had been sent to me by Mrs. Wood. While there, although I had never known her very much before, Mrs. Wood visited me three times. Twice I failed to recognize her, due to my condition, but once I knew her. Later, after I left the hospital, December 11, she visited me several times.

"After I was discharged from the hospital she told me when visiting my home that my injuries were caused by a blackjack and that her husband, Ralph, had either bit me himself or had me hit.

At that time she hinted that something should be done to take care of Ralph. A week before Christmas I met her in her office one night. She introduced me to Ambrose Haggerty and William Thompson and said to them: 'This guy is all right. You can talk in front of him.' Then the three of them opened up and told me the scheme.

DEED OF HOME

"I was to get the deed to my home, worth $15,000, and title to another home. The plan was to kill both Sullivan and Wood. Later we decided only on Wood.

"This thing pieced on my mind and I told my wife. She told me to go to the police. Instead I went and told Earl, bookkeeper for Wood, and he told Wood and Sullivan.

"Sullivan went to Roy Smith, Riverview police chief, and we framed it so the police would be there when I was meeting me.

"Mrs. Wood's plan was that I was to drive Haggerty and Thompson to Wood's office. I was to go in and speak to him, come out and tell them if any one else was there. Wood was to be blackjacked, thrown into his own car.

WRECK CAR

"We were then going to wreck the car and injure some one on Wednesday of this week I met Haggerty and Mrs. Wood and had lunch with them in a restaurant. The plans were gone over while we ate.

"At night after work, I went to Mrs. Wood's office. She had been drinking. Haggerty was there also. Some time. We ate again and went out and had some drinks. Then we went and stood a car. Mrs. Wood sat on a bench.

"About 8 o'clock we set out for Thompson's home. When we got there Haggerty went in to get Thompson.

"Then a man named Taylor Pierce, dressed in a special police uniform, came to the car. He said, 'Hey, what's this all about?' Mrs. Wood said: 'You'd better get in on this and come along with us.' Apparently Mrs. Wood knew him, but I didn't.

PIERCE ARRIVED

"Pierce went back to the house and came back in a few minutes in civilian clothes. He got into the car and we all started for Wyandotte.

"On the way I was scared to death, thinking of my wife and baby. I was particularly nervous because of this third party. Before we got to Wyandotte Mrs. Wood was so drunk that, although she first said she wanted to come with us, we had to take her home.

"She left us, saying: 'Remember, tonight I am staying with my mother.' We got to Wyandotte and drove to the office. I went in and spoke to Wood. I told him we were all going back down to Wyandotte for a little while to get a few drinks because I needed them myself to steel my nerves.

"When I came back again I was to go to one side of the door. I told Wood all this.

MORE DRINKS

"Then we went back to get some more drinks. Then we came back and Haggerty and I went to the door.

"When Wood rolled out as was our prearranged signal, Haggerty pulled his blackjack, which he and Mrs. Wood had bought yesterday. He was about to sock Wood when the shooting commenced. You know the rest."

Taylor Pierce, one of the alleged conspirators, in his statement today to Assistant Prosecutor Paul Buckley, said:

"I didn't intend to kill Mr. Wood. I was impressed by Mrs. Wood's promise of easy money."

William Thompson, former member of the merchant police, related a corroborative story, police said.

"She said we could plant dope and whiskey on him and the police would believe him to be a runner, who had been hijacked," Thompson said. "When I first met Holt, I was suspicious of him and remarked to Mrs. Wood that Holt didn't look all right. Mrs. Wood replied he was all right and could be trusted."

FIRE DESTROYS AMES MANSION

Engine 33, had to be taken to the City Hospital after, blinded by smoke, he stepped on a fragment of wreckage and drove a nail deeply into his heel.

A dozen or more other firemen narrowly escaped injury when the first floor of the building and the floor above a sub-basement suddenly collapsed.

Officials of the National Casket Co. arrived soon after the second alarm was sounded. They stated that among the contents of the warehouse and showrooms were 140 caskets, ranging in value from $200 to $12,000 each. J. L. Kirby, sales manager for the firm, was among the early comers.

The building, which was burned was three and one-half stories high and was of brick construction. At the time of its occupancy by the Ames family, it was one of the show places of Boston.

The fire was discovered by Arthur B. Shephard, a janitor, who arrived to open up furniture early today. When he attempted to enter the sub-basement, he was met by a rush of flame and smoke. He telephoned a still alarm. Deputy Chief Thomas H. Downer, in charge of the first apparatus ordered a second alarm sounded at once. Chief Sennott, soon he came, ordered a third.

Sergt. Harry Watkins and Patrolman Joseph W. Kiley and John S. Flaherty, all of the Back Bay station, established fire lines to control a large crowd.

and they were married. The young couple went to Chicago to live, and became leaders in society life there for a time, until Atherton entered the diplomatic service.

He was sent to China, and in Pekin Mrs. Atherton took her place as one of the leaders of the foreign colony. Once during the Boxer rebellion she was locked outside the walls of the foreign quarter while a battle was in progress, and was rescued by a detail of American and British troops.

When Atherton was ordered back to Washington his wife created a ripple of excitement by refusing to accompany him on the ground that she must remain with a string of polo ponies she maintained.

Later she visited Boston for a short time, returning to Paris from whence came the news that Mrs. Atherton had obtained a divorce.

She became the bride of Count de Janilhac in Paris on October 11, 1924, thereby marrying into one of the most notable families in the French aristocracy. The count, because of his family and his own activities, was well known in the French capital, where a few years prior to his marriage he was a principal in a court case. The count was charged with beating Georges Anquetil, a journalist, who had said in his paper that the nobleman had won thousands from former Ambassador Hugh C. Wallace at cards.

Count de Janilhac is a noted sportsman. He played No. 1 on the French polo team at the Olympic games in 1924. The countess and her second husband visited Boston the same year.

DEBUTANTE BALL BRILLIANT AND IMPRESSIVE—BETTY ALDEN

The Harry Hill Thorndikes Entertain for Their Daughter, Winifred

KALEIDOSCOPIC AS THE SLANTING-COLORED LIGHTS that rayed over a scene of fairy-like splendor as the begonia vines hung in their soft backgrounds against cream and gilt walls, was the large and [illegible] ball Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hill Thorndike gave in honor of their charming third daughter, Miss Winifred Thorndike. [illegible] it was a young Set party, dedicated to the debutante and her coming out parties though the managers and specific aims had disappeared the ballroom's gilt chairs were immensely decorative to be sure, but definite in numbers. [illegible] there.

YOUTH, THE FEMININE SORT, FLAUNTED ITS FINE [illegible] and coquetry, its sunny sash bows and knowing tassels. Miss Cabot's [illegible] flavor was properly black and white. But it was the dowagers with diamonds and pearls who gave the changing picture a bit of "last generation" formality and grandeur. Mrs. Frederick S. [illegible] Whitwell, who was dinner hostess for Miss Thorndike before the ball, was radiant as the morning in a gleaming white crepe Persian, of course and exquisitely mounted to the wearer's slender figure. Pearls and diamonds were her jewels.

MRS. J. BROOKS FENNO, BORN A THORNDIKE AND STANDING in the relation of aunt to the bud on the paternal side, wore some pearl ornaments with her green moire gown, and Mrs. Richard Thorndike's pearls and diamonds were likewise beautifully enhanced by contrast with her gown. It was of velvet, an elusive golden mauve, with soft sheen for diamonds on platinum threads to glitter against. Mrs. Horace Binney's blue and silver gown was handsome, and Mrs. Binney's dog collar of diamonds and her ropes of pearls had all the elegance and opulence of a grand opera evening.

A STUNNING GOWN ON A HANDSOME MATRON—MRS. HARRY HILL THORNDIKE—in the receiving line, wearing a velvet in one of the new reds, not quite an American Beauty, not a dahlia, but hovering between the two, and having a light and life all its own. Some gorgeous gems came out of Mrs. Thorndike's jewel box to add their priceliness to the occasion. The debutante herself, belle of the evening for whom the magnificence of coming out ball was royally planned, was the loveliest thing imaginable in her Paris coming out frock.

WITH ITS STRAIGHTNESS OF LINE IT CONTRADICTED with delightful effect any suggestion of the bouffant. The material was a metal lace [illegible] white, with long panels touching the heels of pretty little silver slippers. And low on the hips, in a princess fashion, were caught clusters of sheer. For color a trail of bright pink flowers, souvenir from a beautifully appointed dinner table, were caught on one shoulder.

OF COURSE, THOSE GIDDILY BRIGHT LITTLE CONCEITS, the cocktail jackets, were there, adding the tinsel touch. Miss Z. Bennett Phelps, the former Miss Isabel Thorndike, an elder daughter to the evening's host and hostess, wore a silver gid[illegible]

PHYLLIS ELLSWORTH

Daughter of the John C. Ellsworths was an attractive figure in a frock of moire and silver at the debutante ball given Winifred Thorndike by her parents.

[illegible] over a frock of dead black tulle and carried gardenias in an [illegible] shade. Miss Phipps came back to Boston to help celebrate [illegible] son in the debutantes first winter. [illegible] Mrs. Charles B. Delafield, did likewise and gave [illegible] ness to an already bright scene with her begonia pink frock, [illegible] for grace and paniered for the mode's sake.

A COCKTAIL JACKET OF GILT TOPPED MISS LUCITA LELAND'S frothy tulle ruffles. Miss Barbara Welch wore a net gown right down to the floor and looked as handsome as Miss Barbara Welch should look. Matching violets to a violet moire frock, was Miss Adelaide Brown's manner of being in the mode. Miss Justine Prince wore green moire. Miss Sally Sprague's ball gown was the selfsame one in which she herself "came out" in the Somerset ballroom a month or so ago. Miss Carolyn Read's moire frock had a peplum and its tint was a pale orchid. Miss Mary Fitz was in lilac, a ruffled gown rather quaintly done and most becoming.

WITHOUT A DOUBT THE SOFT PLIANT MOIRE, EXQUISITE in its colorings or crystal white as a dew drop, is first choice with modistes and debutantes. Miss Marie Davenport Hixon and Miss Mary Vance were their coming out frocks the former's of water white moire. Moire doing unexpected things slanting up into a shoulder bow and thrusting out in a tied sash from one hip. Miss Vance's frock was moire as to bodice, but the skirt was a series of narrow ruffles to create the bouffant, billowy air.

PRETTY LITTLE PHYLLIS ELLSWORTH'S FROCK WAS moire, shot through with silver, and there was a suggestion of black and a suggestion of the Moyenage in its below the waistline modishness. Chicago's quota of pretty girls included Miss Abby Hixon, Lee, whose golden head rose superbly from a Gobelin blue [illegible] and who defied someone's edict that ostrich fans are "out" by carrying an enormously long and fluttery plumed one to match her frock. And all about the skirt of the frock, well below the hips of course, to be princess in line, were bands of ostrich feathers to flutter as the wearer danced.

JUST HOW GRACEFUL THE BUSTLE GOWN OF GODEY'S LADIES' BOOK can be, Miss Katharine Cunningham Gray showed last evening. Her frock was a honey yellow taffeta with a figure molding bodice and the bustle and sashes Godey's Book pictured so delicately as the vogue of a past generation. Miss Rosamond Gardiner lived up to her sobriquet of "Happy." An infectious smile and a jubilant spirit such as hers means a perennial popularity. Last evening her gown was yellow and her slippers gold, and her smile sunny as the day.

MISS MARGERY FAY FLOATED ABOUT THE BALLROOM in a cloud of white tulle. Miss Constance Percival had a frock that combined black velvet with delicate black lace and was as sophisticated as anything in that young girls smart and effective wardrobe. Miss Mary Hammond's moire was as indefinite, soft green, and it carried threads of silver in its weaving. Miss Margaret Cummings wore black. Miss Madeleine Jonckheere's lovely violet moire almost concealed her heels, and at its shoulder line was sparkling and modish, with shoestring shoulder straps of brilliants.

NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

New York Stocks

MOTORS LEAD IN UPSWING IN WALL ST.

Motor stocks were the leaders in a moderate upturn in prices in Wall st today, Studebaker was head and shoulders over the balance of the motor stock list, the pool which has set a goal of "par for the stock" pressing in with open arms to buy the stock offered for this old standby.

There was not much "push" to the forward move in the coppers, but on the electrical manufacturing stocks, though traders seemed ready enough to buy them at a point or two down from Wednesday's final prices.

Studebaker has been the outstanding general leader in the list market since Monday, and the stock has been widely tipped to go above 110 or more. Officials of the company in marketing forecasts—better than 100,000 cars and contemplation of expansion of plants and machinery, promises big gain earnings this year and a bigger dividend rate, are cited as the reasons who have been backing their judgment with their money. The stock sold today above 97, up 2.

Chrysler Motor, Willys Overland General Motors and United States Rubber sold up at a slightly higher level of prices. United States Rubber sold up over 2 points at 47¾.

After the first hour the whole market wobbled around uncertainly with only a few of the favorites and "pool" issues making progress.

The "big" of these has been Studebaker, which was sub-tracked in favor of the better-placed industrial and utility issues. Central Alloy, also a New York issue, has had a big day in the independent steels.

The U. S. Steel Corporation reported an increase of 202,712 tons in its December unfilled tonnage orders. The 3,792,000 tons of steel comprising the unfilled tonnage of all of the 6-point gain recorded in the list hour yesterday, but selling orders then flowed in, and the stock showed a point or two.

There was plenty of money at 6 per cent.

Amazonia Copper and Interna- tional Nickel were the big pins of the metal stocks. Another of the pool pets, American Can, also made progress to be in the distinguished group at or best prices of the movement.

Kansas City Southern led a belated rise in the merger railroad stocks late in the day and sold up 3 points at 67¾.

Consolidated Gas, which is to head a gigantic merger of New York gas lighting and power companies, sold at the best prices of the month.

GILLETTE HAS BEST YEAR

Gillette Safety Razor Co's net earnings for the 1928 year of $4,347,306, established a new high record in that line. 1928 was the 24th successive year in which the company's profits exceeded those of the previous year. On the 2,000,000 shares of common stock outstanding for 12 months of the year, the 1928 net profits were equal to $2.12 a share as compared with $2.29 a share in 1927. Word of Tex Better Than Any Contract

By JACK DEMPSEY

Former Heavyweight Champion of the World

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—Tex Rickard did millions of dollars' worth of business with a solid handshake and his word as the only contract. He was trusted alike by friend and foe.

WHEN you left it to Rickard, you would receive more than if you signed contracts. I first met him in Goldfield, after he had jumped [illegible] No-son fight.

a boy and had been fighting off and on. Naturally I was no purse he had offered for that a pressure personality then, as he raised in friendly fash on amusement center and recreational mecca of old Reno.

It was many years later when Rickard and I met again. I had just defeated Fred Fulton and was considered the logical contender for the heavyweight championship of the world then held by Jess Willard

"Here's the big fellow" was the introduction with which I was presented to Rickard on that occasion.

"Gosh, he is a big boy," declared Tex as he shook hands with me, adding, ——much bigger than I thought. Then we got down to the business of discussing arthess for the contemplated fight

I said, Tex would not permit that

A LONG, violent, disorganized conference followed. Then out of the confusion one of the men asked for silence and addressed the

Passing the Puck

By BILL GRIMES

George Owen will make his Montreal debut tonight at the Forum against Les Canadiens. For years Canadian fans have been reading of this great American player and they will be out in force to compare George Owen with their favorites.

No one can accuse George Owen of picking a couple of [illegible] which he will get with Herb Gardner.

George Owen is not a good traveller. He slept little during the trip to Montreal last night and after a light breakfast retired to his room. Through the foresight of Wes Green, the Bruins trainer, who let it [illegible] and that the Harvard man was not to be disturbed, George avoided thousand and one interviews.

Dit Clapper saved Eddie Powers from Toronto that has flames. Miss Norma Andrews, was resting easier and appeared to be on the road to recovery, but that he would not return to Boston until the end of the week.

Art Lesmer the Newport R. I. boy, who was picked up by the Rhode Island Reds and passed along to Les Canadiens, will strengthen the Chicago Blackhawks, to which team he has been loaned by Pres. Leo Dandurand. Lesmer is a "good fetcher" but he holds great promise. He is in need of some seasoning

Bobby Kilrea of the Ottawa Senators must have broken his scoring stick. The former Ottawa City League player has not scored a goal this season. The Bruins were ready to give up most of the back roll for Kilrea a year ago and they got a real break when Ottawa refused to listen.

Joe Hall, when [illegible] the Bruins displayed an exceptional [illegible] of hockey. He is way out in front of [illegible] Bruins in goal [illegible] despite the fact that he is [illegible] best defensive wings in [illegible]

Yes, the fans recognize he worth [illegible] Cousins and Hall [illegible] and stood in early [illegible] Rhode Island [illegible] with an easy [illegible] second victory.

[illegible] Stoneham [illegible] its track [illegible] for the 1929 season. It reads: Jan. 12, Lynn Classical; Jan. 18, Burlington at Boston; Jan. 25, Lowell; Feb. 2, Northeastern Interscholastic; Feb. 9, Malden; Feb. 16, B. A. A. Games; Feb. 23, Andover Interscholastic; March 3, State Meet at Boat Armory.

Herp Darrington will be out of the Providence lineup for at least a month. The loss of the Melrose boy's services will be a blow to the Rhode Island Reds for Darrington was a steadying influence to his teammates.

Red Green and Eddie Rodden, a couple of wild Irishmen, put plenty of color in the Bruins when they are in action. Although Green and Rodden play hard hockey, there is nothing malicious in their work. They body heavily but fairly and can take it as well as deal it out.

The Rise of Lotta to Stage Fame

By CONSTANCE ROURKE

CHAPTER 31

Night after night a fruitful and once packed the theater, no longer in the casual costumes of the day carriages rolled up, rare was down a half-empty house, one to the other, of which Lotta's was the best-loved audience of the day.

The opening play was "Mose" half a dozen others signed for the first week. Lotta's part was a boy, and Tom Taylor's "Unequal Match" was a comparatively new play. Even Lotta could not make it catch the town's fancy, it was closed in January to end 29 performances. It emphasized the first tide of exhilaration. It emphasized on the coast.

The situation when Dr. Brot Hope was in a tangle of entanglements and Lotta, as Tom Tape, could with skill and charm. She was found with a series of swift changes of costume. Like Mose's many of the lines presented a similar situation. Lotta's specialty was a series of impromptu jokes with a topical flavor, and a generous dose of local gossip.

The other characters, I believe and know the pieces, were not in the same class with Lotta. Her support was left to the hands of workmen, who were noticed when they had finished the first part of the performance. Lotta's own company was the best she ever had. Possessing no talent herself, she had a good eye for talent in others, and she had surrounded herself with players who were good in their way. Her leading man was Harry Meredith, a handsome, tall, dark man with a fine voice and a good stage presence. Meredith was a favorite with the public for a decade or more. Mrs. Judah was a brilliant performer, a character actress of the first rank. She was a favorite with Lotta's audiences for years. Mrs. Judah was a woman of fine presence and a good actress. The Story of a Girl who mistook thrills for love

A Fine New Serial That Is Right Up to the Minute

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

MADGE SAYRE, young and pretty, awakens on the morning of her 21st birthday resenting the dingy New York apartment she shares with her father, an unsuccessful inventor. Madge craves thrills and unexpectedly finds one when she attends a party given by her friend, Frances Storrs, a business "bachelor girl." It is in the person of Carroll Dudley, handsome artist, aviator and "man about town." Carroll is impressed with Madge's youthful beauty and tells her he has been waiting to meet her her all his life. Meanwhile the party becomes wilder. A week later Madge dines with Carroll at his studio apartment. Madge has her first thrill in an airplane when the engine stalls and the machine plunges toward the earth.

(Now Go on With the Story)

CHAPTER 4

As the plane plunged downward Carroll called out again, but again Madge did not grasp what he was saying. And so it went for her, crashing from sky to earth in a period of time that was set aside from the rest of her life, a time when all thought was paralyzed except for the knowledge that they were crashing down and down, and that she was cold with fear.

And in that nothingness came sudden vibration, sudden noise, and the hideous clamor of the engine was the sweetest music Madge had ever heard.

The engine roared, sputtered and roared even louder, and then was followed by the steady pulsation of power that told even the inexperienced Madge that it was functioning again.

Instantly, her fear gave way to a feeling of exultation. She was even glad that it had happened, as she blood seemed to course again in her veins and she had had another experience and more thrill.

"You were wonderful." The near encounter with death had made her even more interesting, and instantly the horror of fear that had been here only a moment before, left Madge's eyes.

Now she was supremely happy, and she was sorry when she noticed that Carroll had swung around and was skilfully maneuvering back toward the field from which he had taken off.

"Oh, no! Oh, fix some more!" Madge shouted uselessly against the thunder of the motor.

Naturally, Carroll did not hear her. His own nerves were distracted from the experience, and it was with an inward sigh of relief that he felt the wheels of the machine touch the ground. He taxied smoothly to within a short distance of the hangar.

"You cried Madge as at last the plane was completely still. "It's been a thrill!"

But Carroll was holding out both hands to her to help her to alight.

"Thrilled?" he questioned. He asked as she leaped down beside him.

Madge laughed. "I was—but it wasn't why you thought."

"Wasn't?" Carroll's face brightened as he smiled down on her. "She was frightened but she wasn't! I hadn't let you down. You should have heard how you failed."

"It was terrible to frightened for me, Madge," Carroll said. "But then—after it was over, and I knew you were safe—"

He had taken her hands and was holding them tightly.

"You can't do it alone," he warned her. "I'll help you, and for you to be a success. But I can't do it alone, Madge." He broke off, as one of the aviators greeted him.

"You had us all scared, Mr. Dudley, he grinned. "First, I thought you had shot her off—at them—"

Carroll silenced him with curses, oblivious of Madge's presence.

"What do I pay you for?" he continued furiously. "Sit in the grass and don't argue about it, you moron! You—you—"

Madge turned and walked away from the two men, who were busy now in the hangar. Her own nerves were beginning to react from the strain, and she felt that she must be alone for a few minutes. She was trembling violently, and she knew that she was on the verge of tears.

Carroll's voice, raised in anger, followed her, and she knew that he was berating the aviator who had been in charge of the plane. Madge was glad that she had not been there when the accident occurred. She knew that Carroll would have been furious with her, and she was glad that he was not angry with her.

Carroll's voice died away, and realizing the seriousness of the mishap, Madge knew that Carroll would be busy for some time. She walked slowly toward the hangar, and as she did so she heard Carroll's voice again. He was apologizing to the aviator.

"I'll see you at supper for me. He took out his wallet and extracted a bill. "I think that's worth a hundred to you."

He did not see that act to do with what or little, or whether I did or not. I'm sorry I've taught me a lesson. I'll never be so careless again. I'll be more careful for me, and I'll see that you get a bonus."

Madge was silent for a moment.

"I am not going to tell a lie to you, Carroll," she said. "I have been to your studio in the day, and I was not sure that I could. After all, it is quite a long way from—"

MERELY THE BAER FACTS

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

YOU do not realize what an age of luxury means in all four directions until you grab an armful of the 29th annual automobile show in Grand Central Palattzo, New York city.

There are 46 different makes of American motor cars. We advise pedestrians to attend this show and pick up some pointers on broken-field running in 1929.

The finest car on exhibition is one with the rumble seat in front.

This arrangement enables a boy collegian to hug everybody in his car.

We also recommend the new eight-passenger taxicabs with accommodations for two.

The Rolls-Swivel is quite an artistic triumph. The makers have avoided mechanicals and gone in heavily for upholstery.

This car is really an outdoor sofa. The engine is stuffed with scandown. The fenders are detachable and can be folded for small garages.

A charming feature of the Skidd-Cowan is the side-car arrangement for opera nights.

When you get to a traffic jam you climb out into the side-car and speed away.

You get to the opera on time and leave your big car in the jam to help preserve the community spirit of congestion.

You cannot visualize or subtract the happiness of a pedestrian walking among 46 cars which are stalled.

There are quite a few foreign cars in the show. But they are too expensive for a man with egg on his chin.

We recommend the domestic car. Both for town use and grade crossings.

There are now close to 50,000,000 automobiles in America. And the demand is still wrestling with the supply.

Henry Ford has hired 30,000 more workingmen.

And 15,000 of these men are skilled musicians whose job will be to tune out body squeaks.

By 1930 this will be a land of one-way streets and no left-turns. The only direction in a town will be out. The only direction in a jam will be in. And the only green lights will be those in drug stores.

KEEP THE CHILD INTERESTED

By CONSTANCE CAMERON

LUCKY is the child who resides in a town which boasts of one or more nursery schools, and lucky is the child whose mother takes advantage of one of them to teach her "baby" how to handle himself in relation to other youngsters of his own age.

In the old-fashioned families an institution of this kind was unnecessary. By old-fashioned families I mean families like the one my great-grandfather had. She was the mother of 12 children and adopted a 13th. There was no danger of the younger children being spoiled or of social adjustment being made difficult for them later. It was a give-and-take proposition all the way around. They learned early in life to share. They learned that toys must often be given up so that each might have a chance to play with them. They were made acutely conscious of the fact that the world held other individuals who had rights and privileges akin to their own. So, when they trudged the long mile to the country schoolhouse and found other children there it was no surprise to them. There were no wrenches of adjustment, because things hadn't always gone their own way at home.

But with the modern families it seems that three is considered a huge number of offsprings, and the family boasting an only child is easy to find. The "only" children in particular need to attend a good nursery school before they enter public kindergartens, for an "only" little person, growing for five years among adults, is pretty apt to know that he is "the baby" and therefore eligible to liberties and privileges that only he receives.

It is astonishing how long the little rascals will let us wait upon them after they are able to do things for themselves.

In nursery schools the children are taught to take care of themselves. In the ones I have visited I have gathered that there is no directed play requiring close application, or efforts, beyond the capabilities of the wee people happily busy there. But they are taught to play happily and peacefully with children of their own age. They are on an equal footing.

If you have no nursery school to which you can send your very very young child, see that he has plenty of companions of his own age. They won't always agree. Don't expect it. Stand in the background, ready to help them make adjustments when they need you. But as far as possible, let them work out their own problems.

Did you know that your own two-and-a-half-year-old could wash his own face and hands, comb his own hair, pour his own milk, button his own clothes, dress and undress alone? I'm sure he can if you allow him to, because I have seen children of this age doing these things happily and very successfully, and if other mothers' children can do them, yours can.

"There is a button open on your waist," announced a nursery school teacher to a wee mite who stood before her. "Please button it." "I tant," lisped the child. "Oh, surely you can," replied the teacher. Holding the button between two fingers, she said: "Now—put two fingers around the button." And the child did, much to his surprise and delight. Twice within the next 15 minutes he opened his blouse just so he could put "the hole around the button." Proud? I should say so. Aren't we all proud when we discover that we can do something which people have always presented to use as being difficult?

How to Escape FLU

1 Avoid so far as possible the places where flu germs are most apt to be; crowded cars, public meeting places, warm, stuffy rooms.

2 Be careful of close contact with others and beware of all coughers and sneezers. Breathe through the nose.

3 Get lots of rest. Eat plenty of citrous fruits. Keep the bowels open. Take every precaution to keep in good physical condition, so your system will have high resistance against germs.

4 Above all, avoid catching cold. Any cold may be the forerunner of flu. Take Bayer Aspirin at the first sign of a cold and you can ward it off. Gargle with Bayer Aspirin at first sign of sore throat as this will remove the infection.

5 If you have any reason to suspect even a touch of flu, call your doctor.

VATICAN NEARS REUNION WITH KINGDOM

Rome, Jan. 10 (AP)—Negotiations between the Vatican and the Italian government are still being carried on, despite the death of State Counsellor Dominico Barone, toward permanent conciliation between the House of Savoy and the Catholic Church.

It was regarded today that these negotiations had floated well toward a favorable solution in the mid-face of Premier Mussolini's prediction of last year when he told newspaper men that Catholic hopes that relations between the Holy See and the Italian state cannot be regarded with much optimism.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

By RUTH WAITE

Every woman with gray hair knows that her hair is entitled to do something besides grow gray. Nature's birth right to retain her youthfulness and charm as long as she lives. When a woman mentions gray hair to me, I don't hesitate to advise the use of Sage Tea and I recommend sage tea and sulphur.

A brew of common garden sage, when properly combined with sulphur, produces a delightful, beautiful color, luster and beauty. So perfectly does it do the work that its use is unnoticeable. You may either prepare the tea yourself, or you can get already prepared and ready to use Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur in the name of Improved which has been used for many years to darken gray hair, an opportunity for the hairdressers to overhaul many a discussion without being expected to attend.

GERMAN PRINCE QUITS ALL HOPE OF MONARCHY

Copyright, 1929, International News Service.

Berlin, Jan. 10—Prince Wilhelm, aged 22, eldest son of the ex-Crown Prince of Germany and logical pretender to the throne in the Hohenzollern and Prussia, seems definitely to have abandoned all hopes of ever restoring the Hohenzollern monarchy.

This, at least, is the interpretation placed today upon a remarkable letter written by the Prince of Prussia and published in a series printed by the Berliner Lokanzeiger and entitled "What Germany Needs Most Now Is Real Christmas Time."

SAYS FATHER STUDENT

The two notable passages of this letter which, according to the opinion of many German and neutral leaders, seem to foreclose all further appeals of her son's "fading hard cash," run as follows:

"He—Prince Wilhelm—is a student of the law, takes great interest in the history of his fatherland and holds fast to that which is good and in these days should, with all his mental gifts and power, endeavor to be ready to help wherever he can make himself useful."

The Crown Princess concludes her letter by saying:

"You see, my life is filled with the duties of a quiet and diligent task approaching me from without, so that no time is left for brooding or wailing and complaining. We all live in a period in which there have to be created values instrumental in aiding our people to march again at the head of European culture."

Neutral readers argue that the boy's placing himself at the disposal of the community unconditionally and without specifying the range of his ambitions, is tantamount to his having given up definitely all hopes for a monarchial revival and restitution of the Hohenzollern dynasty.

The second paragraph is interpreted as meaning that the Crown Princess and probably the entire family of the former heir to the Kaiser's throne, have once and for all overcome the shock of the revolution and have settled down to "face the facts." That is, they have accepted the fact as irrevocable that Germany has become a republic.

LIKE ALL MOTHERS

In the rest of the letter the Crown Princess says she is filled with all other German mothers, who, apart from social duties, see their chief mission in the bringing up of their children.

Incidentally, Germans tend not like Hitler. Hindenburg is probably the idol of the ex-Crown Prince as her "mama" is husband. This is evidenced by the fact that the letter is addressed to the "Lokanzeiger," the official mouthpiece of the royal family addressed on its front to each other with the full title.

WANTS ACTION ON GOLD STAR MOTHERS BILL

Washington, Jan. 10 — Senator Copeland (D.) of New York has opened a drive to get action on the Gold Star Mothers bill which has been repeating in the military affairs committee since last session.

From the floor of the Senate Copeland talked upon Senator Hiram Bingham (R.) of Connecticut, in charge of the military affairs committee, to report the bill favorably to expedite the measure.

Bingham declared the committee had acted favorably on March 10 of New York for an opinion as to the constitutionality of the bill and was waiting for the reply.

The bill passed the House last session. It provides for a pilgrimage to France and Belgium at the expense of the government for Gold Star mothers and widows. The government would pay the expenses of the pilgrimage of the mothers and widows of those who made the supreme sacrifice in the World War and now sleep beneath the poppy of crosses on foreign soil.

ROCKEFELLER JR URGES DEFEAT OF STEWART

New York, Jan. 10 (AP)—John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has sent letters to stockholders of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana seeking their proxies for the annual meeting of the company in March to oppose the re-election of Col. Robert W. Stewart as chairman of the company, it was learned today.

Mr. Rockefeller indicated he did not seek other changes in the management of the company.

"I feel the loyal and devoted leadership of the president of the company, his colleagues and the board of directors has been with the company over 20 years, backed by the whole hearted support of other members of the company," Mr. Rockefeller's letters have also been connected with the company for many years, the interests of the company will be fully protected and its business well handled without Col. Stewart."

Mr. Rockefeller requested the resignation of Mr. Stewart after he was charged with perjury in connection with his testimony before the Senate Teapot Dome committee. Mr. Stewart declined to resign, and was acquitted of the charge on Nov. 29.

In his letter to stockholders, Mr. Rockefeller says he is a large stockholder in the Standard of Indiana, outlines his letter to Col. Stewart's proposal that his executive salary for next year and adds "definite assurances have already been given me by the executive responsible that the additional amount of stock of the company that they are opposed to Colonel Stewart's re-election."

"If this is your position," the letter continues, "please send the enclosed proxy to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., H. S. Aldrich or William Rockefeller."

PROSECUTOR OF AIMEE ON TRIAL IN BRIBE CASE

Los Angeles, Jan. 10 (AP)—The trial of former Dist.-Atty. Asa Keyes on charges of accepting bribes received the testimony stage today after the accused man had been described by Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson as the successor as county prosecutor, as the recipient of many gifts for "mixing" criminal cases.

Fitts' statement to the jury painted Keyes as "associate, confidante and receiver of money and confidences" of Peter Pantages and Julian Petroleum Corporation case.

About 20 persons were indicted after the failure of the Julian Company, which was the subject of investigation by Keyes, and which is charged with about $300,000,000 resulted in about 20 persons being charged with conspiracy, but all were later confessed by dismissal or acquittal during Keyes' term of office.

The jury was told that Fitts said that Keyes received $125,000 for obtaining dismissal of charges against Kenneth Ross, one of those indicted in the Julian case figures. The prosecutor said payments of $25,000 from Jack Ilenry, Ross' partner, and $100,000 from Ross, had been made to Ben Goldoff, closed intermediary, who had left Keyes' office to go to Europe to pay off gambling debts and buy a home there.

The jury will be locked up for the remainder of the trial.

Root to Help Revise World Court Code

Geneva, Switzerland, Jan. 10 (AP)—Officials of the League of Nations and the Permanent Court of International Justice are to confer at the first meeting of the committee of jurists which will study revision of the statutes governing the latter body. Most of the committeemen prefer that the first meeting be held in Geneva during the session of the League Council.

The decision of Elihu Root, noted American jurist, to serve on the committee has created great satisfaction in League circles.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

GOLDWYN WILL FILM 'RIVER GAMBLER'

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Copyright, 1929, International Service

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 10—Sa.

L. Goldwyn has no intention of being caught napping when it comes to getting the right dialogue for his talkies. He has engaged Joseph Hergesheimer to write "The River Gambler" for Ronald Colman. I cautious move over Hergesheimer's effect I now what he does of Colman.

I say this bearing in mind a tonrise Nebelkamp wrinkled and Tom Negri called "Flowers of Passion" by this same Hergesheimer. Yet in all fairness to Hergesheimer I must have been a few dozen supervisors who mangled his original dear s ri ove the world in an entirely foreign interpretation.

One of Goldwyn's most successful pictures, "Cytherea," came from the picturesque pen of Hergesheimer, and not much of a reputation that for Ronald Colman. At any rate, Sam believes in me the world's greatest author, and who are we to disculpate him.

"The River Gambler" will follow "Half Day Dominoes," which goes into immediate production.

WHAT one picture can do for a woman is nobody's business. You will pardon my slang, I am sure. Milton Sills had been playing young heroes with love-sick notions. He wasn't doing particularly well. Then along came "The Valiant" and flaxflofled Haggerty, and, presto change, Milton Sills rode right to the topmost wave of popularity.

The public is funny that way. It must have visible demonstration of an actor's ability. First, Milton Sills must have bigger and better stories. Result: "The Valiant" out and bought "Pat and Mike," a Cosmopolitan story by Richard Connell, a tale of a cop and a criminal. Sills plays both, the first time a dual role has been played in a talkie.

It is going to be interesting to watch how he will be able to change the inflection of his voice. Frank Lloyd will direct and Bradley King has finished the adaptation, which goes into production today.

WHEN Adolph Zukor hears his only daughter is working as an extra in Mary Pickford's picture, "Coquette," he is pretty apt to offer her a job himself. Mildred Zukor is Mrs. Jesse Lasky in private life, and a daughter-in-law of the late Marcus Loew, has absolutely wanted to stay in the movies. But her dad has frowned on his pretty daughter's ambitions.

In fact, Mildred, as her friends call her, has had nearly everything her heart desired except a part in the movies. Now she has that and is reporting every day for work at the United Artists studio at the salary of $5.50 a day. "Maybe," says "Mickey," "I'll earn $7.60 if I have my own wardrobe."

JAMES CREELMAN, the son of an eminent father, Creelman's father was a newspaperman for many years and the tales of the exclusive stories he obtained are now a matter of journalistic history.) is on the Pitts Nyle lot definitely. He has just sold two stories, one tentatively titled "Wolves of the Waterfront," a story of New York and the other without so much as a name.

Jimmy leaves for New York today to be among the first nighters when his play opens the first of March. You bet you could a play. Keep an eye on this young Creelman, for he will probably break in his father's record—and that means something in the newspaper world.

THE daily influx of stage folk is the most amazing and immediate effect of the talkies. Hollywood has more strangers at this moment than at any time in its history, and most of them have to do with sound pictures.

One of the most recent arrivals from New York is Sylvia Arthey, a stage lady who created considerable attention in "Crime." She plays one of the most important parts in "Through Different Eyes." I rather think it's the part Mary Duncan was to have played, for Mary is going to Italy with F. W. Murnau and will not be ready to begin work on the Jack History picture for weeks.

Sylvia Fields is another young woman who brought her melodious voice to Hollywood. She is going to be located at the Paramount studios, where she is playing in Maurice Chevalier's picture.

I DON'T suppose to the outside world it means a thing while a picture is in production what girl plays the leading role, yet out in Hollywood it is considered hot news of the moment.

Maxine Day, who was to play opposite George O'Brien in "A Son of Anak," will make her debut as a Fox player opposite Charles Farrell. Lane has been made O'Brien's leading lady. Miss Lane was discovered by Fred Niblo while playing Mae Marion, and did her first screen work in the Fred Thomson pictures.

TWO mistakes in a week. That is enough to make any woman think she ought to go into a psychopathic ward for rest. Even Goldwyn-Mayer pages me frantically to say that the picture going into Grauman's Chinese Theatre is "Broadway Melody," and not "Melody of Love." The latter was made by another company. An offer as I have listened to the name "Broadway Melody," you'd think I would get it through my head.

Barry Beaumont, who directed it, gets a brand new contract for his part in making it.

While I am in the mood, let me also state that the Christie picture in which James and Lucile Webster Gleason will play is "Meet the Missus" and not "Meet the Wife." The same idea but a different word. Speaking of the Gleasons, their son, Russell Gleason, has just signed a new long term contract with Pathe.

MARRIED AND HARRIED

SO THIS IS "INTERFERENCE!"

Clive Brook and Doris Kenyon do pretty well for "smart" people in getting along together until a dark man with a moustache (William Powell) enters their life and—well, they call it "Interference," a new all-talker, showing next week at the Olympia and Fenway.

One of the great pioneers in the realm of the sounding cinema is Roy J. Pomeroy, who directed what is said to be a remarkable all-talker, "Interference," showing next week at the Olympia and Fenway Theatres.

Pomeroy was commissioned by Famous-Players-Lasky three years ago to experiment with the sound screen. He is a noted mechanical engineer with many inventions to his credit. During the war Pomeroy was connected with the British Aviation Mission and perfected such apparatus as the ground speed indicator, a device for sighting aerial camera and a camouflage indicator.

Pomeroy's experience in the motion picture business include such stunts as the parting of the Red Sea as was shown in "The Ten Commandments," he is at present in charge of the sound activities for Paramount.

SAYS GARLIC CHECKS FLU

"Italian cookery, because of the onion and garlic it contains, is excellent insurance against the prevailing flu," said Chef Pascali, spaghetti chef of Madame Cavana's Italian Restaurant, at 335 Tremont st.

Anyone should be perfectly willing to eat ravioli, chicken a la Calabrese and Scaloppi Cavana himself chooses for flu. If they are flavored as deliciously as were the dishes prepared by the chef during a demonstration in the Madame Lee kitchen.

Madame Cavana herself made the ravioli. The recipe for these delicious dishes will be found in this paper next Saturday.

NIGHT SHOPPING AT PAINE'S

For the benefit of those who find it inconvenient to shop during the day, night time shopping will be established in the Furniture Co. of 81 Arlington st., during the period of the annual Paine sale, which will become an institution.

Every Wednesday evening the store will remain open from 5:30 o'clock, for the first time in the history of the institution. Distributed specials, which have been made over a period of time, is another feature the store has in vogue.

Quality and value" have become the ideals of the house, which announces that values of 50 per cent reduction can be obtained because of the Paine buying quantities.

Will Speak on Baker Foundation

Mrs. T. Grafton Abbott will speak on "The Works of the Anna Baker Foundation" at a meeting of the social relations committee of the Congregational Educational Society tomorrow noon in the society's rooms at 14 Beacon st. She is secretary of the publicity committee of the foundation.

WIFE OF HOUDINI ILL; DOUBTS SPIRIT CODE

New York, Jan. 10 (INS)—Mediums, spiritualists, and explorers of "The Great Unknown" today can still contend for $10,000 in awards for producing spectacular mystic sensations which cannot be reproduced by scientific or natural means.

This was the announcement of the magazine through which the prizes are offered despite the fact that Bessie Ford, minister of the First Spiritualist Church, says he received and decoded the secret message of the late Harry Houdini to his wife from the world of spirits.

Officials of the magazine, a scientific publication, declined to say that the message in code had been published in a book, "Harry Houdini, His Life Story" by Harry Kellogg, and that since its publication none of the tests have been successful in decoding the message.

Joseph Dunninger, head of the psychical research committee of the magazine, expressed the opinion that a third person, possibly a nurse, might have received the message both in code and decoded when Houdini and his wife discussed the matter privately before the fatal illness struck.

Mrs. Houdini is now seriously ill and has at times been delirious and she may have revealed the message herself, Dunninger said. Mrs. Houdini herself is reported today to have grown skeptical of the message received by Ford.

Officials of the magazine said Mrs. Houdini claimed to have withdrawn her $10,000 award several days ago without notifying the magazine. The magazine, however, will continue the $10,000 prize for true spiritualism. Ford has expressed no intention of claiming any of the prizes.

Dunninger declared that a good magician could produce messages satisfactorily and for the benefit of the press produced a note to do so. He read the message that a girl reporter had written on her own notebook and then placed it in an envelope without seeing or touching the envelope which was held by another girl reporter.

Afghan Rebels Hold Positions at Kabul

New Delhi, India, Jan. 10 (AP)—Rebels under Bachia Sakao appeared today to be retaining their superior position in their attack on loyal Afghan troops near Kabul, Reports here were to the effect that there was no further news of fighting in Afghanistan.

A royal airforce plane flew from Peshawar to Kabul and took yesterday, carrying British and Afghan mails. It was announced today that a total of 125 persons had been evacuated by air from Kabul.

Archbishop Dies

Melbourne, Australia, Jan. 10 (AP)—The Most Rev. Harrington Clune Lees, Anglican Archbishop of Melbourne, dropped dead today. He was 58 years old.

When Hen Is a Rooster, Rooster May Be a Hen

Chicago, Jan. 10 (AP)—Dr. A. V. Domm of the University of Chicago announces he has found a way to change roosters into hens, but has been unable thus far to make them lay eggs.

Transplanting of glands effected the transformation, Dr. Doom explained in his report of the experiments to the American Society of Zoologists. The experiments were conducted under the direction of Prof. Frank R. Lillie.

Dr. Domm said his experiments not only change roosters to hens, but vice versa as well. The transformed hens became to all external appearances roosters, developing comb, plumage and spurs, the report stated.

Operations were performed on 175 female chicks during the first 30 days after hatching. When they reached maturity, however, the male plumage disappeared and the customary female plumage appeared. Otherwise, the transformation remained complete.

In the second series of experiments the roosters lost their ability to crow several weeks after the operation, developed combs typical of hens, and exhibited all the characteristics of hens save that of laying eggs. This function of the hen may yet be developed in the transformed rooster, said Dr. Doom.

MISS SPEARE IN CONCERT AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

Dorothy Speare, a young lady of many talents, gave a concert in Symphony Hall last night, assisted by the Boston Symphonic unite Arthur Fiedler. It was Miss Speare's second concert in her home city and her popularity was evidenced by a very large audience.

The singer selected several groups of songs and arias of a character that put light voice to the test, but her choice was unluckily served though not always happy in their selection from Puccini's "Les ladies Galantes," with its quaint, sound Oriental background, an aria by Rosario's "Il Re Pastore," and "Con me mi Serio," from Bellini's "Somnambula," were successful enough to justify their inclusion on a concert program.

These things and her two groups of Miss Speare sang in a voice of good natural quality. As it is used at present, for years to come, the tone production is not apparently, of a homogeneous type, and as a result the quality of tone changes. On the musical side, Miss Speare has not yet found herself; there is insufficient "suspension" in her singing. Nevertheless, on the basis of her native equipment and her good musical sense, a second much of the enthusiastic applause accorded her during the concert.

The Symphonic, under Fiedler's direction offered remarkably fine accompaniments for the singer's arias. The conductor hung on the singer's every syllable, and I can recall no more sympathetic accompaniment in concert to equal those in sympathy and precision. In addition, the orchestra played Mr. Hanson's two suites arranged by Mottl, and selections from Ernst Krenek's much-discussed opera "Jonny Spielt Auf," which is to receive its American debut next week at the Metropolitan Opera House. Judging from the two impressions, it may be said that this is the best jazz yet produced by a "serious" composer.

SCANTILY-CLAD GIRLS BARRED BY WHALEN

New York, Jan. 10—Night clubs and cabarets featuring revues of scantily-clad girls have been ordered by Police Commissioner Whalen.

In a statement reiterating his policy of intensive police activity against vice and crime in connection with the drinking resorts, the commissioner said:

"This also applies to the so-called high-class speakeasy restaurant and cabarets that parade nude women as a feature of their floor shows."

Commissioner Whalen restated his clean-up policy as an answer to editorial criticism of the police which, more than one house raids have been made and at least 26 speakeasy proprietors arrested, whereby the penalty for reopening after raids.

It has been noted the commercial name of the Whalen police policy is the statement said. "They are modeled after the New York police and fast. For their information let me again repeat the policy of the police commissioner.

"To maintain a speed in police activity that will keep the vicious criminals in fear, and to keep up police activity against the crime-breeding speakeasy dispensing poison liquor."

The police of this city have begun to put out of business and kept out of business.

Sunlight Not Cause of Cancer, Dr. Says

Baltimore, Jan. 10—Dr. Joseph C. Bloodgood, nationally known cancer specialist and director of the cancer clinic of Johns Hopkins hospital, declared, in replying to a report of the New York Academy of Medicine, that sunlight is rarely a factor in the cause of cancer.

The report warned against excessive sun baths and too frequent use of X-Rays.

Dr. Bloodgood said that there was no danger at all in the ordinary case of sunburn which heals quickly.

G. O. P. Deserves Rebuke

Its Senate Leaders Offend in Attempting to Log-Roll the Paris Pact

It is high time that the American people took cognizance of an extraordinary situation in the Senate for which the Republican party is wholly responsible.

We refer to the attempt of the Republican leaders of the Senate to use the naval replacement bill to log-roll the Paris pact to ratification without amendment, reservation or even interpretation.

Instead of permitting the Senate to complete its consideration of the naval bill authorizing new cruisers to replace those long obsolete, the Republican leaders have displaced this important measure with their quack remedy for war.

This enables them to make the Senate's consent to the Paris pact the price of the Republican party's consent to the passage of the cruiser bill.

Nine years ago a headstrong Democratic administration attempted to make the ratification of the league covenant the price of ending the state of war which then existed.

This trick was balked by a bipartisan coalition of patriotic Senators. And the American people at the next election sustained the Senate and drove that Democratic administration out of power.

This new Republican trick can also be balked by the same sort of coalition. All that is needed is for patriotic Senators on both sides of the aisle to raise up for the naval replacement bill a leadership of grit and gumption and good faith.

That bill had the right of way when the Senate reconvened after the Christmas recess. And it ought to keep the right of way until it is voted upon.

If Senator Hale, in charge of this bill, will serve notice upon the politicians of his party that he will not allow them to make him the stalking horse for their scheme, if he will demand that the Senate complete its consideration of the naval bill, before it disposes of the Paris pact, we believe a majority of the Senate will support him.

No Senate ought ever to abuse its share of the treaty-making power by selling its advice and consent to the ratification of the treaty.

No Senate ought ever to barter away its share of the power "to provide and maintain a navy."

Ratification of the Paris pact will not take the place of a strong navy. Even the official apologists for the pact admit that, and their admission convicts them of taking advantage of the urgent needs of the navy to induce support for their "feeble imitation of the League of Nations."

Now is the time for patriotic Senators on both sides of the Senate aisle to rise above political affiliation and rebuke the Republican party for the reckless manner in which its Senate leaders are playing party politics with American independence and American security and the American Constitution.

Triumph of Ingenuity

Flight of the Question Mark Culmination of Years of Study and Experiment

Let the credit for the record-breaking flight of the army monoplane, Question Mark, be placed where it belongs. The achievement was no miracle, as many news writers assert. There was no providential aid extended to the aviators.

The amazing endurance of the monoplane is a tribute to the men who made it possible, the United States Army, which planned and perfected the arrangements; the builders of the airplane and the motor, the fliers who manned it and the ground crew that co-operated. Fate, luck, chance played no part in this flight. It was the culmination of years of study, experiment and navigation. It showed what America can do in the air when allowed to work out its destiny unhampered.

The Question Mark went up seeking a definite answer to the oft-uttered interrogation regarding the length of time an airplane might remain aloft—and it answered its own question by breaking the record for all types and classes of aircraft.

This was done despite the disjointed, conflicting policy of the Government toward aviation. The Army worked alone, while the Navy looked on. The Navy now will seek to surpass the Army's achievement, and in the competition, the ancient jealousy between the two arms of national defense will be developed further, with duplication of effort and material, wastage of money and man-power and reduction of efficiency.

Aviation as an arm of defense should be treated as an integral unit, on a par with the Army and Navy, in a Department of National Defense. America's safety against possible aggression demands it.

How to Test Love

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Kinsey proclaim the complete success of their companionate marriage. The Kentucky lawyer married the French actress almost a year ago. By agreement they parted immediately after the ceremony and the bride went to Europe to see whether she could find any man whom she could love more than her husband. She found none, and now they are reunited.

It is a good story and they should stick to it as long as they stick to each other. How long that will be is no more certain than the duration of any other marriage. If Mrs. Kinsey had lived with her husband five years, then had gone abroad in quest of a better man and had returned joyfully to her spouse, the test of love would have been more convincing. Years spent apart mean nothing in matrimony. The years together tell the tale!

Hammers for Women

Hardware dealers report increasing sales of tools to women. No, they are not tweezers and clippers or even pots and pans. They are augers and screwdrivers, planes and even hammers. Evidently the girls have learned to drive nails straight!

This should be reassuring to any husband who, returning late on pay day from a long office conference or the bedside of a sick friend, finds his bride fondling a hammer while supper grows cold on the table!

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 10—About 10,000 manuscripts of plays are dumped weekly onto the desks of New York theatrical producers. This does not include the large number sent literary agents, the professional play readers and manuscript doctors.

The great majority are hopeless, amateurish efforts and come from all corners of the world. Many encompass the futile dreams of servant girls, farm hands, lumber jacks and lonely seamen. Thousands of mothers try playwriting in the hope of educating their children. It is not fiction that almost everybody tries to write a play.

The largest number of manuscripts come from Southern states, but California has a huge number, especially among those who have retired and wish to relieve the monotony of leisure. There is no calling offering greater discouragement especially for the unskilled.

The first play by an amateur has been achieved but the ratio is about one in five million. An understanding of stage technique is now almost an absolute necessity. The best plays have always lately come from those associated in some fashion with the theater.

Nearly every producer has an expert play reader. One firm employs nine. Manuscripts are received by them and carefully read before going to the producer. Only those likely to interest him in more than a casual way are presented. Nine-tenths out of a hundred submitted he never sees.

There is no doubt thousands of play ideas submitted by the amateur have been plagiarized, but unless his play has been carefully copyrighted he has no chance of reprisal of any sort. Schools of dramaturgy have turned out a few successes but the number is extremely small. Experience counts most.

But once the writer of a play has nibble for his effort, the rest is comparatively easy. Every lawyer at his heels. There is some sort of mysterious communication among the flocks about such matters. The news spreads like wildfire.

INNUMERABLE playwrights have made fortunes and lost them as quickly trying to produce their own plays. A good play belies the old theory too many cooks spoil the broth. As a rule the best plays are those that have received the professional touch of many hands. Belasco, incidentally, is said to receive more manuscripts than any other producer.

THERE is one block in the Forties between 5th and 6th avenue that boasts of 37 speakeasies. Most are in old brown front houses and to the casual passerby are as quaintly and peacefully mid-Victorian as their architecture. The windows are hung with white curtains and the reception room resembles the old times front parlor with its napping white cat and blazing chandelier. But in the hidden recesses are perfectly equipped bars going at full blast.

NEW YORK offers extremely strange jobs. Recently a comely young girl employed in a department store departed on a trip around the world with all expenses paid as the companion of an elderly lady. There was no salary, but an agreement was drawn up whereby the young lady was to receive the sum of $1000 deposited in a bank, at the completion of the journey, provided she shunned all male commonsenship on the trip.

ON every trip to London, I have dropped around to The Cheshire Cheese in Fleet street with the rest of the pokelis to absorb the "literary atmosphere," loll in the seat where the good Dr. Johnson regaled cronies with witticisms and partake of a portion of the famous meat pudding. I recently reread Boswell's biography of Johnson, and not once in The Cheshire Cheese mentioned. Tricked again. We now wonder if Washington was ever at Fraunce's Tavern.

ON an engraved manifesto from a cafe: "We trust it will not offend our patrons to offer for dessert a new version of the lowly apple strudel."

I should be snooty about apple strudel in any guise after spending most of my life in boarding houses featuring prunes and fined apricots.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DID Mr. Ford really say that "not a successful boy ever saves"?

I don't know. But if he did say so I'm sure he referred to something much more vital than money.

You may or may not save money and be a success, but YOU CANNOT SAVE YOURSELF AND BE A SUCCESS.

You cannot live triumphantly if you go at the job half-heartedly, doling out your energy and enthusiasm with a niggardly spirit.

Life doesn't yield to pinch-penny methods.

It does not yield its abundance to those who haggle at the cost.

You must give yourself generously if you wish big dividends out of life, either in money or joy or power or love.

Study the lives of successful people and you will find that this is true of all of them.

Their outward methods might seem to differ.

Some of them used money extravagantly.

Some were thrifty—

Some of them worked at tremendous speed—

Some were plodders—

Some made a lot of noise about their affairs—

Some didn't—

But in one respect they were all alike—

THEY ALL GAVE THEMSELVES LAVISHLY, WITHOUT COUNTING THE COST, TO THE THING THEY DESIRED.

This does not mean that the giving was always easy. Successful people, like all other people, must battle with laziness, discouragement, vanity, fear and boredom. Often they must battle even harder than other people. But in spite of these handicaps they gave all they had. And because they gave all they had, because they did not "save" themselves, they won out.

This law applies to every class of work, every type of human. It is as true of the priest and the poet as of the plumber and politician. "Do correct do ANYTHING well in this world, whether it be the saving of souls or the selling of cheese, unless you do it with all that's in you. That is the secret of all success.

And that's why "bad" people sometimes succeed where "good" people fail.

Bad people are apt to be hustlers. Good people are too often huddlers.

A DARING SINNER HAS IT ALL OVER A TIMID SAINT.

If you want to get anything out of life, spend all you have of yourself; don't save!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Economizing for the purpose of being independent is one of the soundest indications of manly character. —Smiles.

Tapeline of Biography

by Herbert Kaufman

The confessions of St. Augustine and Jerry McAuley alike show how the worst of starts may change to the best of ends.

No man's career may be accurately estimated before death has closed his books for final audit.

Until then opinion must withhold decisive verdicts and grant reasonable benefit of doubt.

Philanthropy more than once has worn the mask of the miser, as witness the deceptive lives of Thomas Guy, Stephen Girard, Johns Hopkins and Russell Sage, the leading skinflints as well as the greatest benefactors of their respective times.

Lots of folk play the game that way, caring nothing for the grandstand's applause and waiting for the last inning to bunch their scores.

There's sound stuff left in plenty of flawed material.

And there are plenty of flaws hiding under popularity's polish and veneer. To which fact, various governors, bankers, Sunday School superintendents and other hypocrites taking morality cures in Federal sanitariums, offer vivid testimony.

The law doesn't detect all double-crossers, but biography eventually discovers them. To forbid post-mortem tapelines upon sneaks, grafters and four-flushers, would tend to pass maudlin miscalculation tear-retouched portraits on to posterity.

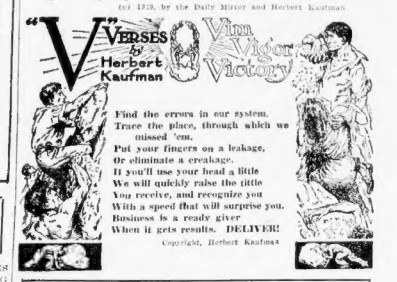
And neither vultures in borrowed plumage nor asses in lions' skins are entitled to parade their disguises through history.

The price of place is criticism, which is nothing more than the verification of merit.

When we line the halls of fame with apocryphal monuments and portraiture; when we hide beneath lickspittle art and Pecksniffian memoirs the actual likenesses and accurate account of recreant, selfish lives, we simply encourage the false tribune in his opportunism and assure the Pharisee that his secret soul shall never be revealed.

The saying "De mortuis nil nisi bonum" (meaning, we shall speak only well of the departed) wasn't inspired by rogues and snides.

(c) 1929, by the Daily Mirror and Herbert Kaufman.



"V" VERSES by Herbert Kaufman

Have a Hobby!

Mortimer J. Fox used to be a vice-president of the Manufacturers' Trust Company, but he dabbled in oil paints, and now he has won distinction as a landscape painter. You could not hire him to go back to banking at treble his old salary.

Hobby riding may carry a man far and high. Joseph Conrad was a sailor before the mast when he taught himself English and fussed with writing prose. John Masefield was cleaning New York barrooms when he amused himself with poetry. Eli Whitney was killing time on vacation when he devised the cotton gin.

There is always a lot of fun in a hobby, and you never can tell when it will develop into a winged horse.

Less Lynching

There were nine lynchings too many in America last year, but even the nine hangings recorded in five States represented a decrease under any other year. In 1839 there were 175 persons hanged by mobs. Let us hope that 1929 will be the year in which lynching in this country will have ceased completely.
